Japanese jet crashes in Malaysia

Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia (AP) — A Japan Air Lines DC8 jet crashed in a rubber plantation north of Kuala Lumpur during a thunderstorm Tuesday, killing at least 19 of the 79 persons aboard, an airline spokesman said. Survivors reported the jetliner broke in half on impact and the front section burst into flames.

Jetliner reported hijacked

Tokyo (AP) — A Japan Air Lines DC8 jetliner with 155 persons reported aboard was hijacked Wednesday over India.

Japanese press reports said the hijackers identified themselves as members of the Japanese Red Army, the country's best known ultra-left terrorist organization. Officials said they could not confirm the report.

House stands firm on abortion

Washington (AP) — The House rejected Tuesday a proposal to use federal funds for abortions in cases of rape, incest or medical necessity, clearing the way for a compromise with the Senate on abortion and passage of a $60.2 billion social legislation bill.

Jewelry quick on getaway

Chicago (AP) — Glen Sacks, a jewelry salesman, loaded two cases containing 1,000 diamond rings into the trunk of his car. When he slammed the trunk lid shut, the engine started and the car sped away leaving him standing on the curb of a downtown street, police said.

Sacks, 30, said he had parked his car Monday evening to go into his office to get the rings, which he valued at $150,000.

Someone entered the car, slumped in the front seat, and waited until the gems were put into the trunk, police said.

Sacks told police he barely caught a glimpse of the back of the driver's head as his car took off.

House-Senate conferees agree

Washington (AP) — Breaking a two-month deadlock, Senate and House conferees have agreed on a $14 billion housing and community development authorization bill. Final Senate and House passage is expected before Congress adjourns for the year.

The measure, approved Monday, would extend the community development block grant program for three years and basic federal housing programs for one year.

The block grants, a merger of such former programs as Model Cities and urban renewal, would be distributed under a new "dual formula," giving a funding break to older cities of the East and Midwest.

Soviets offer test ban

Associated Press

Gromyko makes surprise announcement at U.N.

United Nations (UPI) — The Soviet Union Tuesday offered to join with the United States and Great Britain in a treaty to ban underground nuclear testing for a limited period.

In a speech to the U.N. General Assembly, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said, "The prohibition of all nuclear weapons tests would be a major step conducive to lessening the threat of nuclear war and deepening detente."

The United States has long sought a comprehensive test ban treaty. Negotiations are scheduled to resume in Geneva next week and the announcement by Gromyko caught American officials by surprise.

Shortly after Gromyko's speech, the Soviet diplomat and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance left for Washington for talks in the White House with President Carter.

In his speech, Gromyko said the Soviet Union had repeatedly stressed its willingness to enter an agreement banning underground testing.

"Today we are taking one more step forward," Gromyko said. "Under arrangement with the United States and Great Britain, we agree to suspend for a certain period of time underground nuclear weapons tests even before the other nuclear powers accede to a future treaty."

He did not specify what was meant by a "certain period" and despite the apparent reference to a previous arrangement, American officials at the United Nations said no firm agreement had yet been reached.

The Soviets previously have balked at signing an agreement to ban underground testing, saying such a pact would be counterproductive without the inclusion of France and China.

The surprise announcement that Gromyko and Vance were interrupting their U.N. visits to meet with Carter followed a grim Soviet warning in the General Assembly Tuesday that efforts to negotiate a new strategic arms limitation treaty were stalemated over the U.S. development of the neutron bomb and the cruise missile.

Both were issues that Carter and Gromyko were expected to thrash out again at their second meeting in the past week.

While Vance met a string of European and Latin American diplomats in his hotel room, Gromyko strode to the podium as the first of the "superpower" speakers at the new U.N. General Assembly with a speech heavy on generalities.

Even his attack on America's weapons development lacked the old diplomatic warrior's sting. He dismissed the neutron bomb as one of America's "merciless types of weapons" and, predictably, blamed the cruise missile for delaying a new SALT agreement.

"Unfortunately," he said in the second day of three weeks of U.N. general debates, "it has to be stated that recently Soviet-American relations have experienced certain stagnation if not a downright slump."

He spoke to a hall divided between delegates and empty seats.

The more critical diplomatic work was under way outside the assembly chamber, particularly on the 37th floor of the glassy U.N. Plaza Hotel where Vance, pressing U.S. efforts to bring Arabs and Israelis together over a conference table, hosted diplomats from Finland, Belgium, Portugal, Turkey, Mexico, Venezuela, Peru, the Netherlands and Guatemala.

Between it, Vance squeezed in a lunch with British Foreign Secretary David Owen, to discuss the new Anglo-American plan for a transition to black majority rule in Rhodesia — an issue destined shortly for the U.S. Security Council.

Suspect held in death of Lexington woman

Lexington (AP) — A 30-year-old Kearney native was held Tuesday amid tight security in the Dawson County jail in connection with the brutal beating death of a rural Lexington housewife.

The nude battered body of Mrs. Ruth Eby was found on the edge of a field Tuesday afternoon, several hours after Dawson County authorities took the man into custody.

Sheriff John Rohnert told reporters that charges were being prepared against the suspect, a laborer at a Lexington manufacturing plant.

Mrs. Eby was the second Lexington-area woman to disappear in recent months, setting off waves of fear through the southcentral Nebraska community.

Asked if residents could sleep better with a suspect in jail, Sheriff Rohnert said emphatically, "Yes, because we think we have the man."

County Atty. Willard Weinhold said the suspect was arrested around noon Tuesday. He would not say whether the arrested man might have told deputies where the woman's body was.

Weinhold said charges probably would be filed Wednesday, but he was not sure what those charges might be.

Witnesses at the scene said the woman's battered body was found in a grove of trees about 19 miles northwest of Lexington. Her clothing was found about 3 miles away, scattered along a one-mile stretch of road south of a small school house.

Mrs. Eby's husband, Richard, was among the searchers who found her body, officers said.

A piece of her clothing was sighted about noon Tuesday by a Dawson County Roads Department employe, Chuck Watkinson, who notified Sheriff John Rohnert.

The hastily-organized search party found Mrs. Eby's body in mid afternoon. The area was blocked off while Rohnert awaited the arrival of Weinhold, who also is the county coroner, and a state crime lab unit from North Platte.

Mrs. Eby, 32, vanished from her rural home Friday afternoon. A neighbor said she saw Mrs. Eby's car pull into the driveway about 2:30 p.m., but when another neighbor brought two of the three Eby children home from school, Mrs. Eby was gone.

Another woman, Judith Dangler, also 32, vanished Feb. 7. Widespread searches have turned up no trace of her.

Sheriff John Rohnert was reluctant to connect the two cases since, he said, he had nothing concrete on which to base any assumptions.

However, he said Mrs. Eby's disappearance bore some similarities to that of Mrs. Dangler.

In both cases, the sheriff said, the women were discovered missing when their children came home from school. There were no signs of struggle in either household and both women's cars were in their driveways. The television in the Eby home was on, he said.

Rohnert said Mrs. Eby met her husband, Richard, in Lexington Friday afternoon after shopping for groceries. The groceries and her purse were found in the family's home 7 miles northwest of Lexington when the children came home. Richard Eby returned from work shortly after and notified authorities.

The latest search for Mrs. Dangler was conducted Sept. 19 when Rohnert checked out a tip from a Florida woman who says she uses psychic powers to locate missing persons.

The sheriff said he didn't think Mrs. Eby and Mrs. Dangler knew each other, but he said that in a community the size of Lexington, which has a population of about 5,600 persons, it was possible they were acquainted.

The Lexington Chamber of Commerce had offered to act as a central agency to collect pledges to finance a $20,000 reward for information regarding the disappearance of Mrs. Eby and the arrest of those responsible.

TV Guide writer reveals 'dull' association with CIA

Philadelphia (AP) — The editorial director of TV Guide magazine, Merrill Panitt, says he cooperated with the CIA in 1958 in an association which he calls "remarkable only for its dullness."

Panitt defends his relationship with the agency in a copyright story in the magazine's Oct. 1 issue.

"I still don't see anything morally or journalistically wrong in a member of the press giving information or observations to the CIA on a one-time or even on a regular basis," Panitt wrote.

Panitt said he was prompted to make public his CIA connection by Carl Bernstein's report in "Rolling Stone" magazine that 400 American newspapermen have worked with or for the CIA. He calls Bernstein's report "profitable journalism."

"I wondered how many of the 400 were men like myself who saw — and still see — nothing at all wrong in telling the CIA the same things we'd tell any cocktail-party acquaintance who bothered to ask," Panitt said.

Panitt argued that journalists are "still citizens of this country, not a profession apart. And if they can personally be of service to their country, it is no journalistic crime to perform that service."

Panitt said he became involved with the CIA while he was managing editor of TV Guide in September 1958. With the opening of the Soviet Union to foreigners, he wanted to write some articles about television there for TV Guide and The Philadelphia Inquirer, which were then owned by the same company.

To avoid red tape, Panitt wrote that he applied for a tourist visa instead of press credentials but told the Soviet Embassy of his intention to write articles and arranged appointments with television authorities in Moscow.

A week before he was to leave, the CIA contacted him, Panitt wrote. The agent, who "looked more like a bond salesman," was chiefly concerned that "I stay out of trouble," Panitt said.

The agent said he would like to see Panitt again after he returned to discuss the editor's impressions and warned him about where he went and what pictures he took.

"Don't try to be a spy," Panitt recalled the agent telling him.

The trip itself was unexciting, Panitt said. About two weeks after he returned, the CIA man showed up. The agent had read his articles and asked him a few questions, mostly about the last names of the editor's Soviet guides, Panitt wrote.

Panitt said he gave the agent a copy of the journal he kept during his trip and that concluded his association with the CIA.

Unknown scout deserves praise

By Patty Boutler
Star Staff Writer

The good deed was done but the Boy Scout who did it is yet to be found.

One of the 500 Cornhusker Council Boy Scouts who serve as ushers for Nebraska home football games found a lady's purse in the after-the-game clean-up. He turned the purse over to his troop leader who passed it on to Jim Cusick, coordinator of the ushers, crowd control and first aid.

Cusick normally takes left-behind items to the university's lost and found department which closes right after the game. But in checking for identification in the purse, he found what he believed to be a "wad" of money and decided to take the pocketbook to the Lincoln police station where the contents could be inventoried and safely kept.

A man who would rather have something done twice than not done at all, Cusick decided to follow-up the case on his own. He finally got through to a very relieved Mrs. Dorothy Rydberg of Omaha Sunday morning.

More important to Mrs. Rydberg than the $53 in the purse was an heirloom diamond ring that had more sentimental value than material worth, she said. In her family more than 100 years, the ring was to be passed down to her granddaughters..

Upset over the loss, Mrs. Rydberg was "in a state all night long," she said. Both sets of her car keys as well as her husband's and her own eyeglasses were also in the misplaced purse.

Cusick's call Sunday morning was good news, she said. Mrs. Rydberg immediately offered to reward the deserving scout, but no one knows who he is.

When game time rolls around this Saturday, Cusick said he expects to locate the scouts who usher in the area where the Rydbergs sit and find out who did the good deed.

Mrs. Rydberg said she hopes to meet the scout and his leader at a designated place before the game to offer a small reward for the troop to use as it wishes.

In his 45th year of scouting, including 20 years of working home football games as a volunteer coordinator, Cusick notes that "a lot of times these kids won't come forward and say they did it. They're embarrassed by the whole thing."

Whether or not the scout comes forward, Cusick said he is still proud of his boys. "It really makes me feel good when something good like this happens."

Landlord might be charged in rights case

By J.L. Schmidt

A Lincoln landlord may face charges in Municipal Court for evicting two tenants from an apartment in April, 1976.

The Lincoln Commission on Human Rights voted unanimously Tuesday afternoon to recommend that the city attorney's office file charges against Virgil Wadhams for violation of the city code governing discrimination in housing.

That action followed a public hearing on a complaint filed with the commission by Amy Miller, formerly a tenant in Wadham's 534 N. 27th St. apartment. She told the commission that Wadhams called her to tell her to move out the day after a birthday party for her roommate.

Ms. Miller, a white woman, told the commission that Wadhams apparently objected to the fact that she and her roommate had "some black guys over" and that they left late that night and one of them returned early the next morning.

She also said that Wadhams had sent her a letter explaining his feelings on the matter after the phone call. He originally gave them five days notice but changed that to one month at her request. She and her roommate moved out at the end of May.

Ms. Miller said Wadhams had sent her a calendar with a picture of a white family on it and had written a note with "racial references" on it, sometime before the eviction notice.

Wadhams told the commission he had determined that a black man, referred to only as "Mac", was living in the apartment and had stored his motorcycle in the garage provided for Ms. Miller's use.

He said any advice given to the tenants was purely "fatherly." He added, "I guess sometimes when you try to do good it comes back at you."

Wadhams also referred to "several complaints" from neighbors that the tenants were causing a disturbance in the area.

"One neighbor even told me she was afraid to come testify at this hearing 'cause she's scared as hell," he added.

Ms. Miller denied that Mac was living at the apartment, although he had spent the night on several occasions. She said there were no large parties at the apartment, and that she never had any complaints from the neighbors about her conduct.

Ms. Miller's roommate, Cheryl Salmen, had also filed a complaint with the commission, but, at the request of Wadhams' attorney, Hal Hasselbach, the complaint was dismissed.

Commission Director Gerald Henderson told the commission that Ms. Salmen couldn't be located prior to the hearing, and Hasselbach argued it would be unfair to pursue the matter for that reason.

Hasselbach also objected to the manner in which the hearing was conducted, stating specifically that he didn't like the way the two-hour hearing "drug on." Commission Chairman Richard Powell continued the hearing until all the commissioners had had a chance to ask questions of Miller and Wadhams.

Assistant City Atty. Jim Faimon said his office will review the testimony presented and determine if Wadhams violated the code on the basis of racial discrimination.

"If we decide he has, a misdemeanor complaint will be filed against Wadhams in Municipal Court, probably later this week," he added.

Wadhams could face a $500 fine or six months in jail, if found guilty in the court. Faimon said Wadhams could also appeal the commission decision to the Lancaster County District Court.

Henderson said matters come to a public hearing only after "conciliation efforts have failed." In this case, an attempt to get the two parties together failed, he added.

Ms. Miller originally sought actual damages suffered when she had to move, he added, but he couldn't disclose the amount since it wasn't made public during the hearing.

Public hearings are rare for the commission, and most matters are dealt with in terms of case numbers during regular meetings because of federal civil rights laws, Henderson explained.

Air pollution will get worse

Washington (UPI) — A government report Tuesday said air pollution will get worse through the next 20 years but not because of the increased use of coal proposed in President Carter's energy plan.

The report said U.S. environmental quality will deteriorate through the end of the century because of energy production in any case, but it will be hurt less under President Carter's energy plan than under existing conditions.

It warned the worst potential impacts threaten small sections of the nation which contain specific new energy sources like oil shale. Such impacts — involving areas as small as two counties — must get careful attention under any energy plan, it said.

Dr. James Liverman, environmental chief of the Energy Research and Development Administration, said the study is the first to examine nationwide environmental impacts of different types of energy development.

Liverman said pollution caused by power production would "not increase as rapidly or as much" through the year 2000 under Carter's energy plan, which includes strong conservation and environmental control measures, as it would if present policies and development patterns continued.

He conceded to a news conference the report's projections based on Carter's April 20 plan "may be too optimistic" in some areas because congressional action has killed or weakened many of the plan's proposals for encouraging conservation by taxing gasoline, gas-guzzling cars and domestic oil production.

An updated analysis using the $500,000 computer program developed to produce Tuesday's report will be prepared after Congress passes the final version of the energy plan, Liverman said.

Carter's energy plan would draw 36% of the nation's energy from coal by the end of the century, compared to 21% supplied now by coal and 27% projected for the year 2000 without Carter's plan, the report said.

"The concern that increased coal use under the (energy plan) would lead to severe air pollution — especially sulfur oxide — problems does not appear to be the case," it said, noting the combined effect of reduced energy consumption and stricter requirements for pollution control equipment on power plants.

The report said air pollution will get worse, however, and the biggest impact will be felt in the West. Liverman said that means the nation "had best get cracking now to insure that the best available (antipollution) technology for the rest of the century is a lot better than it is right now."

Senate held hostage by filibuster

Washington (UPI) — Two liberal senators — both rookies at the art of filibuster — are holding the Senate hostage. "The members are just furious," an old-time colleague said.

Sens. James Abourezk, D-S.D., and Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, are staging a filibuster against deregulation of natural gas so tantalizing that they have driven Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd to the brink.

Byrd, who knows how to use every rule in the book, is at the point of trying to change a couple of them in an effort to crack the Abourezk-Metzenbaum tandem.

But Abourezk and Metzenbaum — an unlikely pair of filibuster leaders as can be found — are perfectly willing to go for "weeks and months" to gut the gas bill.

Neither early sessions, late session, threats of all-night sessions, fading hopes of an October adjournment, jeopardizing President Carter's energy program or the irate glares of friends and colleagues has worked.

Neither has "peer pressure."

Abourezk, a 46-year old maverick who has decided to quit next year after one term, never has belonged to the Senate "club." Metzenbaum, who was first appointed to the Senate, turned out when he ran for a full term, made it back last year but at 60 is still considered a rookie.

It is not classic-style filibuster of the 1960s vintage where oratory — some good, most pedestrian — dominated the chamber. Nor is it the type of filibuster waged in recent years when the Senate hardly mentioned the subject, going on to other bills until a compromise was reached, cloture invoked or the bill put aside.

Abourezk and Metzenbaum are waging a new-style filibuster — filibuster by amendment. They have around 500 amendments ready to go and the right to have them read and to get a vote.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., calls it "parliamentary gymnastics." It could be a long time before they lock up the gym.

Because cloture was imposed Monday, each senator is only allowed one hour of debate and the time is being husbanded carefully. As a result, the words are few, but increasingly bitter.

Byrd, who is committed to getting an energy bill to the White House before adjournment, accused Abourezk and Metzenbaum of "delay, delay, delay for the sole purpose of delay, delay, delay."

But Abourezk replied "efforts to put peer pressure on people who feel strongly is not going to work.

"It is not very pleasant to be put in a position of protest," Abourezk added. "It is not very pleasant for me emotionally or physically."

Nor is it for anyone else. Committee meetings are broken up for quorum calls; the clerk's voice drones on reading every word of every amendment; the bells for votes toll almost every half hour; appointments are cancelled; breakfast is early, dinner late; appointments are cancelled; the work stretches from five days to six.

The filibuster rules the Senate once more.

Alderman Stemberk caught $3 worth of rats in own back yard.

Chicago (AP) — Frank Stemberk is commander in chief of Chicago's Great Rat War.

He's passing out free rat traps to anyone who wants them and trying to come up with more money to reinstate a dollar-a-head bounty on the rodents.

Stemberk, alderman of the 22nd Ward on the city's West Side, passed out $720 in one recent week — that's 720 dead rats.

The bounty fund was exhausted, however, as men and boys raced through the peaceable, middle-class neighborhood with clubs and baseball bats.

"We'd like to find an angel to put up more so we could keep paying the bounty," Stemberk said at an interview. "Our office put up $500 and businessmen in our community donated $220. But it was all gone after seven days.

"One woman called up and said she had killed 23 rats," Stemberk said. "When I got to the house with the $23, she said that she and her husband and son had killed two more and the count was now 25. As we were going into the back yard to verify the kill, a live one came running down the gangway and her son beat it to death with a baseball bat. I gave her $26."

Stemberk says the urban rat problem is too big for any one community.

"It exists in every one of our major urban areas," he said. "We need help from the federal government, help from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and help from the Environmental Protection Agency.

"You can't use just any poison," he said. "That's probably just as well because some of the poisons kill humans, dogs and cats. But many of the rats are now becoming immune to the major poisons, such as warfarin, and are becoming superrats. They're proliferating. In my own back yard I caught 20 in one week."

But he was far from home — a woman's complaint of a rat biting her 2-year-old child fresh on his mind — when he hit on the bounty idea.

"I went on a trip to Utah at the time when they had just taken the bounty off coyotes," he said. "A rancher complained to me, 'How would you like it if you city people weren't allowed to kill rats?' When I got back to Chicago, I knew just what to do."

Consumers urged to buy utility stock

Miami (AP) — "If you can't beat 'em buy 'em," is the motto of a new consumer organization formed to buy stock in Florida's largest electric utility to try to influence company policy and keep a check on rate hikes.

"We want to have 50,000 or 100,000 or one million shareholders in Florida Power & Light Co.," said Walter Dartland, a consumer advocate from Dade County.

"Up 'til now, we've only had the illusion of being successful," Dartland told about 50 consumer leaders Monday night. "Have we been successful in getting the consumer involved in utility ratemaking? The answer is no.

"Where is our continuity of consumer input to really put in a little muscle?"

Stock ownership could be the answer, Dartland said.

The new group, called CASH for Consumers and Shareholders, plans to incorporate as a nonprofit organization. Each member will buy at least one share of FPL stock at about $25 each.

"For $25 you get a voice in the system," Dartland said.

He estimated that about 40 million FPL shares are outstanding.

Company reaction to the plan was cautious. "If he's saying that our board of directors is not responsive, I'd have to say that our board is a cross-section of the community, and they have to make decisions based on what is good for the customers," a spokesman said.

FPL serves 1.6 million customers in south Florida and north along the state's east coast.

It has been the focus of consumer complaints for several years. Its fuel adjustment clause, used to quickly adjust rates based on fluctuating oil prices, set off a storm of objections, and its plans to help pay for future expansion by raising rates have been criticized by many customers.

Most recently, FPL lined up against the state Public Service Commission when it voted for an inverted rate structure to encourage energy conservation. The plan gives small consumers a lower unit price on electricity than large users, the reverse of the conventional rate structure.

Dartland didn't address the question of whether consumers - turned - stockholders would become more concerned about company profits than about electric bills.

Zenith is taking plants overseas

Chicago (AP) — Zenith Radio Corp. said Tuesday it will eliminate more than one-quarter of its work force in this country to reduce manufacturing costs. Much of the work eliminated here will be switched overseas.

The employment reduction includes 600 salaried positions, including middle-managment, research and engineering personnel. These employes are being fired immediately, a Zenith spokesman said.

An addition 5,000 or so hourly employes will be dismissed during the coming year.

Zenith employs about 21,000 persons in this country.

The firm said it will transfer "substantial portions" of its television module board and chassis assembly operations to Mexico and Taiwan. It also will buy stereo products from outside the United States.

The firm said it is trying to reduce overhead and labor costs and "thus permit the company to restore its profits and retain its position . . . in the American television industry."

UCLA student presidents agree times have changed

Los Angeles (AP) — Eight years ago, UCLA student body president Tom Norminton set aside money from his office budget to buy gas masks for the staff.

Norminton's wife, Meg, was student body president at UCLA last year, and it's obvious times and issues have changed. One of her toughest financial decisions was what kind of table to buy for the prospering student union.

"In the '60s, there was something bigger than all of us," said Mrs. Norminton, who was back on campus this week at a part-time student. "Now, there's nothing more important than you are. So people are into EST, yoga, biofeedback."

Mrs. Norminton, 22, who headed the student government from the spring of 1976 until she resigned last fall, said her husband "was president in the middle of the war, with the riots.

"My year, the students went to school, went home and got drunk," she said in an interview in her husband's swank Beverly Hills law office. She's works in the law office along with going to school.

Norminton, 29, remembers his year as president from 1969 to 1970 as having "a crisis every day.

"There was always a crowd or a mob," he said. "The anxiety level was really high. I can remember coming back to my dorm room and thinking 'How can this go on? What's going to happen?' "

What happened, the couple agreed, is that student energy burned out and they became tired of fighting. That fatigue has combined with the lack of a central issue to unite students in the '70s.

"When I ran for office," said Norminton, "people wanted to stop the war."

When Mrs. Norminton campaigned, "they wanted benches at the bus stop and pass-fail grading," she recalled.

The couple agreed there are many issues to fight for now — including the environment, equal rights, gay rights — but the only goals common among most students today are similar to those most parents have for their offspring — getting good jobs and making money.

As opposed to the students of the 1960s who were "chasing windmills," Norminton said, today's students are grasping onto personal causes that will will aid them when they enter the "real world.

"The outlook isn't as rosy," he said, "so you have people climbing over each other's backs to get into the available slots in society."

Boyle leaves hospital

Actor Asner files suit

Actor Edward Asner is seeking $122,000 damages for alleged fraud in connection with his appearance as a magician on the television special "Circus of the Stars."

The suit was filed against People's Choice Awards, Inc.; Robert Stivers; and Proctor and Gamble Productions, Inc.

Asner charged that he performed on the show at a "nominal" $1,000 fee, believing that the proceeds would go to benefit the Motion Picture and Television Fund and the Union des Artistes, a French charity, but that instead have gone to the defendants.

Giraffe named after Victor

A giraffe born four days ago in the Brookfield, Ill., zoo has been named Victoria after the fallen Victor of the Winchester Park Zoo in England.

Dozens of phone calls and letters were instrumental in zoo director George Rabb's decision, he said.

Victor died of injuries sustained in a fall during a mating session.

Horse's broken jaw healing in innovative brace

Kissimmee, Fla. (UPI) — When Deck, a 9-year-old horse, broke his jaw, conventional medical practice called for him to be put to sleep.

But owner H.H. "Doc" Partin refused to accept the idea of losing the animal and Deck is still alive and wearing braces.

"All the textbooks say just to put them to sleep when they're like that because they're not going to get well," said Dr. Don Brown, a veterinarian.

Deck's lower jaw was broken in two places and torn in a horse trailer accident.

Brown and his staff took the horse into surgery, mended the torn flesh and set the broken jaw bone by creating an innovative brace made of 10-inch pieces of angle iron welded to four stainless steel pins in the horse's jaw.

Sherwood Brown, Dr. Brown's father and a welder, helped design and make the brace.

The stallion was in surgery five hours on a sophisticated new table and received a gas anesthetic.

"It's the first time I've seen a technique like this on a mandible (jaw)," Brown said.

Deck was up and around an hour after surgery, "actually nipping grass," Brown said. "I think he's going to make it, thanks to Mr. Partin's good care."

Jewish couple's child normal thanks to intensive screening

Los Angeles (AP) — Newly born Joshua Cutler is a healthy, normal baby. Were it not for a campaign to wipe out a dreaded genetic disease that primarily affects Jewish people, Stu and Janice Cutler would have an infant doomed to a low, wasting death.

The Cutlers participated in a nationwide screening program and were found to be carriers of Tay-Sachs disease, an inherited and incurable illness that almost always strikes Jewish people.

Researchers haven't been able to determine why non-Jewish people aren't affected more by the disease, which involves genetic mutation.

Though they are normal, the young couple conceived a child whose nervous system would have deteriorated starting about six months after birth, causing blindness, loss of physical skills and complete retardation. Death comes within three to five years.

An intense screening effort will be conducted in California in October, which Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has proclaimed Tay-Sachs Disease Prevention Month.

Of the 300,000 Jewish people of child-bearing age in the state, only 50,000 have been tested so far, health officials say.

Because a blood test showed that Cutler, 28, and his wife, 25, were both carriers, doctors knew there was a one-in-four chance that any baby born to them would be afflicted. If only one parent is a carrier, the children will all be normal.

So when Janice was 16 weeks pregnant, a technique developed in the last few years was utilized, permitting diagnosis before birth. A needle inserted into her abdomen was used to draw a small amount of the fluid that surrounds the fetus. For three weeks, cells from the fluid were grown and then tested.

"That was the heavy time," recalled Cutler, a clinical social worker. The verdict was returned: It would be a Tay-Sachs baby.

The Cutlers chose to avert the tragedy by having an abortion. Janice then became pregnant a second time, and again the test, called amniocentesis, was done. The child was normal, the pregnancy continued and the result was young Joshua, born last month.

"It's not an easy thing to go through," said Cutler, "but when you think of the alternative. . . ."

Since the test is a simple blood test, Cutler said, it should be a routine check for every Jewish adult of child-bearing age. If a husband and wife find that they are both carriers, they can still have a normal family by submitting each pregnancy to amniocentesis, and terminating the pregnancy if the fetus is afflicted.

Exxon accused of $55 million in Italian bribes

Washington (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission Tuesday formally accused Exxon Corp., the nation's largest oil company, of paying $55.2 million to Italian officials and Italian political parties in bribes and other illegal payments.

Without admitting or denying the allegations, Exxon consented to a permanent injunction prohibiting it from further violations.

The civil action, filed in U.S. District Court, said that Exxon and Vincenzo Cazzaniga, former president of an Italian subsidiary, failed to disclose their activities in compliance with securities laws.

The commission's complaint said that Cazzaniga headed Esso Italiana at the time of the alleged violations from 1963 through 1972.

"Exxon and Cazzaniga and others directly and indirectly expended at least $55.25 million in Italy as payments to political parties, government officials and employes, commercial bribes and other illegal, improper, noncorporate or unaccountable payments," the SEC said.

Carter jabs industry in appeal for energy plan support

Two basic, opposing approaches to dealing with the energy situation are now colliding head-on in Washington as the Senate tackles President Carter's energy plan.

The president wants to curb the American public's appetite for energy. Opponents of conservation want to keep on feeding that voracious appetite by further exploitation of dwindling finite resources.

At this point, the President is losing. The House has passed his energy plan in a form acceptable to him. The most significant initial proposal to bite the dust was the stand-by gasoline tax at the pump which was to be used in case the public did not meet conservation goals. Other than that, the package Speaker Tip O'Neill ramrodded through the House was pretty much what the President asked for.

But the Senate is picking the energy plan apart. The full Senate is moving toward total deregulation of natural gas prices — long an industry goal. The President's plan for partial deregulation was based on the premise that the consumer can stand only so much of price increases for energy and the belief that partial deregulation would provide enough incentive "to explore and to develop new supplies of natural gas through a price which will be six times higher than the price was five years ago." The Senate, however, is not impressed. On the other hand, the Senate Finance Committee has removed the tax on domestic crude oil. The new tax on crude would raise the price to world price level in three steps and insure an increase in the price to the consumer of gasoline and most other petroleum-based products. To take the sting out of the price increases, much of the crude oil tax revenue would be rebated through the income tax system. The crude oil tax is the centerpiece of the conservation program, and the President is hopeful that committee action can be reversed.

Carter, who went to the people in announcing his energy program, is going back to the people to enlist their support in pushing it through Congress. He is pointing out the influence of the oil and gas industry, which is attacking the program from all sides. "The lobbying efforts of the oil and gas industry on deregulation (of natural gas prices) itself show how the special interests are trying to block enactment of the entire energy program. As we depend more and more on energy imports, the special interests should not be allowed to jeopardize our energy future," the President said after suffering defeats in the Senate in the last few days.

Carter can't be blamed for using the pejorative "special interests" in assailing industry lobbying. The stakes are high enough to pull out all the stops.

The big oil and gas companies want everything: unlimited access to the control of all energy forms, unlimited profits — everything. Their power over the Senate cannot be minimized.

One might fault Carter's energy plan for not being tough enough to meet the energy problems of the future. But it is better than maintaining the status quo of reckless consumption of energy. The President's belated, renewed appeal for public support for his energy plan should be heeded.

Fat American

Washington — The Fat American is becoming the symbol of his country in a world where two-thirds of the people are hungry. Eating has become the national pastime and obesity is the No. 1 nutritional problem.

Yet Americans are starved, ironically, for wholesome nourishment. They are the victims of massive advertising which promotes the wrong foods, nutritional experts tell us. The less nutritional value a food has, apparently, the more money the food companies spend to sell it.

The cereal companies, for example, are raking in millions pushing junk food on children. The federal government spends $70 million a year advising the populace on their eating habits. But critics contend that the program is ineffective and the money is wasted.

Neither the educational nor medical professions have responded to the nutritional crisis. Only two states require any kind of nutritional education, and merely 20% of the nation's medical schools have expressed the slightest interest in the subject.

Most congressmen aren't happy about facing the voters after helping themselves to a 29% pay raise without an "aye" or "nay" vote.

Fearing the taxpayers' wrath, several congressmen have been trying to reform the pay hike procedure during secret meetings this summer in House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill's office. A measure suggested by Rep. Charles Whalen, R-Ohio, would forbid any future pay raise voted by Congress from taking effect until the following session.

Supporters argued behind closed doors that the bill would assure voters that Congress would not use the same trickery to boost its salaries again. But two generally reform-minded members, Reps. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., and Thomas Foley, D-Wash., surprisingly tried to shoot down the reform plan.

But the determined Whalen soon sent word that the battle wasn't over. The reformers rounded up nearly 100 cosponsors, both liberal and conservative, and made clear they would tie up the House for days if the measure wasn't called up for a vote.

O'Neill promised to bring the touchy bill to the floor this session. Because each member's vote will be recorded, the measure will probably pass.

Bond vote six weeks away

We support the proposed Civic Center bond issue and the proposed bond issue for storm sewer improvements, both of which will be on a special election ballot Nov. 8 as a result of Lincoln City Council action Monday.

For a host of reasons, including the efficient use of existing facilities and the savings involved therein, office space needs of local government, the lack of adequate facilities here for the performing arts and the opportunity for expanding the appreciation of such productions in Lincoln, the Civic Center proposal makes sense.

And the recent flash flooding in Lincoln should have made it apparent to all that storm sewer improvement needs are acute. There has been talk of the "backlog" for years, but the rains this year demonstrated that the needs are real and demand more than talk.

The inclination of some council members to play off one issue against the other is nothing but cheap politics but for the next few weeks it must be forgotten.

We have an uneasy feeling that says Councilmen Dick Baker and John Robinson may be right in wanting to delay the sewer bond issue until next spring. They suggest that more time may be needed to marshal support for the storm sewer bonds because the proposal was so hastily conceived.

Be that as it may, both issues will appear on the ballot in less than six weeks time.

We hope that the need for both bond issues is adequately explained to Lincoln voters.

Home rule in D.C. — A possible dream

Ron Hendren

Washington — The event was nearly lost in the hullabaloo of Bert Lance's resignation last week, and that's too bad because it demonstrated perhaps more even than the President's handling of the Lance affair that when the chips are down, this man Jimmy Carter has the wisdom to figure out the right course and the courage to take it.

The event was Vice President Walter Mondale's announcement that the Carter administration will strongly support full home rule for the District of Columbia's more than 700,000 residents. It is not a popular cause in Congress, which relishes its control over the capital city. It may not prove to be a popular cause in the states, two-thirds of which will have to approve much of the plan should it survive its first rough test on Capitol Hill.

But it is the right position nonetheless. It is simply an injustice of the highest magnitude to deny three-quarters of a million Americans the same representation in Congress enjoyed by the rest of us. And yet that is the case; D.C. residents have but a single non-voting delegate in the House of Representatives, no one at all in the Senate.

Their elected mayor and City Council cannot pass laws without Congress' approval; they must rely on Congress' sometimes failing generosity when it comes to collecting city funds that ought to come automatically each year in the form of property taxes on federal buildings in the jurisdiction. The city budget is subject to a line-by-line approval on Capitol Hill by people who neither live, vote nor pay taxes — much less stand for election — in Washington.

And when there is a dispute between the city's elected mayor and City Council, who is designated by law to settle it? The president of the United States. As the vice president put it, accurately if somewhat cumbersomely, "The people of this city should not be subjected to burdensome and wasteful executive review procedures in matters that involve no significant federal interest whatsoever."

It is a long way, perhaps years, down an uncertain road before promise can become reality. But the sad truth is that until now no recent administration has been willing even to take the first step and to give its backing to home rule.

If Mr. Carter puts his weight behind his words when the fight begins in Congress, there is a better than even chance that the measure will be approved there and be sent to the states for ratification in the form of an amendment to the Constitution. A better than even chance, in other words, that decades of voicelessness can end for residents of a city that has been called with some justification the capital of the free world.

We pay the nuclear piper

Tom Wicker

Washington — In its three decades of existence, the American nuclear power program — pushed with too much zeal and too little concern for the consequences — may have created a Frankenstein's monster that threatens to slip out of control. Much testimony recently taken by a House subcommittee supports that view.

The threat of nuclear accidents is well known and the danger of nuclear weapons proliferation already has led President Carter to halt nuclear fuel reprocessing, which creates the plutonium needed for bomb manufacture. But that only increased the spent-fuel storage problem, part of the less publicized but perhaps more threatening "back-end" dilemma of the nuclear process — nuclear waste disposal and the decommissioning of nuclear facilities that have outlived their usefulness.

Several authorities told the Subcommittee on Environment, Energy and Natural Resources that back-end problems were so pressing that unless they are soon solved — a most unlikely prospect — not only the construction of new nuclear power plants but continued use of some old ones might become impossible. Even the cautious General Accounting Office reported that the "unsolved problem of radioactive waste disposal threatens the future of nuclear power."

The long abused public faces unacceptable safety and environmental hazards, the prospect of zooming utility rates, and the possibility of loss of an energy source it had been encouraged to think of as a solution rather than a problem.

About 74 million gallons of high-level military wastes are stored in tanks at ERDA facilities — Hanford, Savannah River and Idaho Falls. About 41 million gallons more will be generated by the year 2,000, and if commercial reprocessing is permitted again, 152 million additional gallons will be generated by that year. At commercial reactor sites, 3,000 metric tons of low-level waste are being stored, with an additonal 17,000 metric tons to be accumulated in the next decade.

Leaks already have occurred at Hanford and at commercial storage sites in West Valley, N.Y., and Maxey Flats, Ky., with environmental and safety results not yet clear. At present, high-level wastes, horrendously toxic and with a half-life of thousands of years, have to be moved from tank to tank as the tanks wear out. As yet unproven technology might permit some of this material to be solidified and buried, as are the low-level wastes, in burial grounds that will have to be guarded and monitored for centuries — almost literally forever.

ERDA promises safe and permanent disposal facilities somewhere deep in the earth by 1985; but it has already failed to prove the reliability of proposed repositories in Kansas and Michigan, and the GAO is dubious about the plan, owing both to geological uncertainties and aroused political opposition. What is required, after all, is no small matter — proof that such a repository can isolate radioactive waste from the environment for hundreds of thousands of years.

Meanwhile, the nuclear industry itself estimates that it will run out of spent-fuel storage capacity by 1985, and it's not clear how more will be provided or by whom. Illinois, for example, is vigorously opposing General Electric's petition to expand a heavily used storage facility at Morris in that state. California has passed a law requiring nuclear plants to have a proven means of disposing of wastes; since spent-fuel storage requirements would normally increase twenty-fold in that state by 1985, the end of its nuclear power program could be in sight if nothing is done.

Despite this impending crisis, the GAO has reported, "after several decades of work," neither ERDA nor its predecessor, the AEC, have demonstrated "acceptable solutions for long-term storage and-or disposal" of nuclear wastes, or even "satisfied the scientific community that present storage sites are geologically suited for long-term storage or disposal."

Idea proposed for dangerous school crossing

Today's Mail

Columbus system

Columbus, Neb.

Upon hearing on the Mel Mains Report on Channel 10 of the concern that parents and teachers are feeling for the safety of children crossing the streets at 33rd and Vine to attend Hartley School, I visited that school last week. I have a seven-year-old granddaughter who has just entered the second grade at Hartley and I would like to add my concern to that which has been expressed.

Cars were driving through that intersection at high rates of speed. In order to cross, a pedestrian must push a button at the corner and, although I walked across the street rapidly, the "Don't Walk" sign flashed on before I was two-thirds of the way across.

May I suggest that the city of Lincoln adopt the method for the protection of children in the elementary schools that is in effect in Columbus? Here we have flashing red lights that are in operation during the times the children are going to and from school and during the period of recess. All cars going past the schools must come to a complete stop at any time and light is flashing.

Drivers in Columbus are glad to co-operate in the protection of our children. Surely those in Lincoln will be, too, if such signs are installed.

GRETCHEN ELLEFSON

Using common sense

Lincoln, Neb.

So Lincoln has spent $30,000, "only $6,000 of which came out of the local taxpayers' pockets," to study the transportation needs of the elderly, handicapped and low-income people.

But the local controversy about the present bus loop has been laid to rest.

It seems ironic that a great number of the protests were made by the elderly who find it more difficult to get where they want to go since the present "loop" was instituted. It didn't cost $6,000 to find that out. It was evidenced at the bus hearing last February.

Now observe the public's use of the buses. Where are the crowds of people watching for the buses? At 11th Street between N and O. At 11th Street there are several benches and at 14th Street there is one good bench and one broken bench.

Does it take $30,000 to figure out that the loop is going the wrong way?

I have had many elderly and handicapped people tell me they just can't get close enough to the doctors' offices by riding the present buses. Why not resume the N and P Streets routes? We can't run individual buses for everyone, but we can observe how we can collectively serve more people and spend less money.

We have so many grants but forget there is such a thing as common sense.

DOWNTOWN OBSERVER

On statistics

Lincoln, Neb.

The Lincoln Star gave a two-column spread on Sept. 26 to an item headlined: "Forbidden birth control used by most Catholics." A smattering of supposed statistics was quoted from the Guttmacher Institute as a basis for this conclusion.

It was significant that no "statistics" were given regarding how the replies to a survey were obtained. What areas of the world were covered? How many people were contacted? After all, there are almost 50 million Catholics in the U.S. alone. A valid report would present such elementary items as these.

The Guttmacher Institute as reported is a division of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America. That in itself provides a key to their "statistical conclusion."

MARK THORNTON

Facts on Panama

Lincoln, Neb.

Two writers in this column recently, Anton W. Uldrich of Milligan and Roger Bowker, have a serious misunderstanding about the Panama Canal.

First, the USA did not buy that strip of land on which the canal was built, so we do not own a piece of real estate to give away. We have a treaty giving the details on what we could do. Compensation was paid yearly on that treaty. The new treaties merely change some of the old treaty.

Second, the circumstances by which we secured the first treaty were not very moral nor upright, as we secured Panama's freedom from Columbia by underhanded means.

There are numerous points I might write about but I feel that it is not necessary if American citizens so opposed to the new treaties would seek out facts and not keep emotional false views.

RETIRED HISTORY TEACHER

For keeping canal

Lincoln, Neb.

So if we don't want to give up the Panama Canal, we are "jingoists" and "warmongers," according to Don Walton.

Well, we have Guantanamo to surrender after the canal, then Puerto Rico, then of course Taiwan. After that we can take our time about doing Rhodesia and South Africa in.

We have $7 billion invested in the canal. We left $3 billion in Vietnam under the direction of Dean Rusk & Co.

No, we should keep the canal and tell Castro's friend, Trujillo, to go away and quit bothering us. Of course, he won't but then he could get further instructions from Fidel.

The canal is vital to American shipping which includes trade with many South American countries. People who want us to control the canal are not looking for trouble. They are simply for keeping a protective device we have had for years.

SEMPRONIUS

Favors sidewalks

Lincoln, Neb.

The Star relates that people have their blood pressure up over proposed sidewalks.

To me, progress is developing anything that is better for the people. Of all the towns I have lived in, there have always been sidewalks on both sides of the street.

The small towns had board walks and I loved them because as a little one, they clattered as I ran up and down, rattling the loose boards. Many had no paved streets, but there were always neat walks so people might walk safety, out of range of traffic, from horses and buggies, to the trolley to our nifty buses.

Home-owners get winter exercise shoveling off snow so workers and children can get to work and schools and so the oldsters can go to grocery stores. I've never known it to fail. After a night's snow storm, the daring seniors were out in full force, defying broken legs and hips, even when I worked down on O Street.

The unnecessary dolling up of O Street is costing a bundle, so by the same means let's put men to work laying sidewalks wherever needed.

SOD-BUSTER

Luck to Lance

Lincoln, Neb.

So the "hard losers" accomplished what they set out to do — ruined a man's reputation personally and politically and tried their best to discredit a President who dared to uphold him because he knew and trusted him.

I would like to know where Percy and Ribicoff and the other persons on the "ferreting committee" were when Nixon was doing all his dirty work, along with Mitchell, Haldeman, Erlichman, Hunt, Magruder and scores of others, not forgetting Jerry Ford who pardoned him, a corrupt President.

Martha Mitchell (God rest her soul) knew what was going on and tried to warn the country, but would the reporters and media listen to and believe her? No! She was kidnapped so she couldn't tell the facts as they were.

So, again — where are the persons who kidnapped her? Are they serving a kidnapper's sentence, or am I wrong in assuming that kidnapping is still a federal offense?

Isn't it time to scrutinize some of our high public officials, some who have grown up in Congress, from kindergarten up? That is going back a long way for some, but that's what they did to Mr. Lance.

I'm almost convinced that criminals are the only ones who come out winners, as per Richard Nixon who is now rolling in wealth for trying to ruin this country.

I heard Percy's half-hearted apology for exaggerating, which Mr. Lance graciously accepted, but the damage had already been done, as Percy knew it would, for goggle-eyed reporters were ready and willing to pounce on a big scoop.

Good luck to Mr. Lance, regardless.

WHERE WERE THEY?

A check on Curtis

Blair, Neb.

Governor Exon is to be commended for his continued loyalty to and backing of Clive Short for U.S. marshal in Nebraska. Short was once acceptable to both Senator Curtis and the FBI in a successful bid for U.S. marshal. The doubts now raised by Curtis are pure dirty politics. The turn-around by the FBI has to be just as suspect. The FBI is no longer as lily pure as once regarded. Much less competent Nebraskans than Clive Short, both Democrats and Republicans, have served our government.

One wonders if Hruska had his own colleague in the U.S. Senate in mind when he once referred to "mediocrity." This might be a good time for the FBI to dig into the Curtis past to gain an accounting of the millions of campaign dollars he has received to reveal to what uses such largesses were put.

DEWEY NEMETZ

Courteous request

Lincoln, Neb.

I would like to compliment a Lincoln police officer for the consideration I received recently.

I was driving in downtown Lincoln one night and forgot to turn on my lights. An officer pulled up beside me and asked me to turn on my lights. I remember the days when I would have been pulled over, stopped and detained for questioning over such an incident. Instead I turned on my lights and the officer thanked me.

I appreciate Chief Hansen and the "new" Lincoln Police Department.

China manages well despite ideological resistance to debt

By Keves Beech
(c) Chicago Daily News

Tokyo — How does a proud, self-reliant but backward country like the People's Republic of China acquire enough capital to finance its development without going into debt?

Answer: It doesn't.

Officially, China's pragmatic new leadership is relying on the sweat and frugality of its nearly one billion people to produce the money to help bring it into the 20th Century. Going into debt is ideologically anathema to Peking.

The reality is something else. Long before the pragmatists did away with their left-wing adversaries by the simple expedient of locking them up, China was accepting billions of dollars of credits to finance its imports from the West.

Last year, for example, China used up nearly 23% of its foreign exchange, earned by exporting products worth $5.75 billion, to pay off the principal and interest on its debts held by creditors abroad.

But the Chinese Communists don't go into debt; they accept credits.

Less doctrinaire governments borrow money from foreign banks and make no bones about it. The Chinese don't do that because it is ideologically unacceptable.

What they do is to accept credit, or deferred payments, on needed imports which are financed by commercial banks or governments at the source of production.

U.S. experts estimated that China is making deferred payments of $1.6 billion on manufacturing plants purchased fom U.S., Japanese and Western Europe source since 1972. It works this eay:

The Chinese pay 10% down and 10% on delivery. The remainin 80% is financed over a five-year period at 6 o 7% interest. But this, Peking contends, isn't debt.

Japan is China's biggest trading partner. Between 1972 and 1976 China bought $935 million of plants from Japan. Of this amount, $750 million was in deferred payments over a period of five years.

To all surface appearances, the credit came from the supplier companies. In reality, 80% of the loans came from the Japanese government's Export-Import Bank and 20% from Japanese commercial banks.

None of this, it should be stated, reflects on China's ability to pay. Peking has an excellent credit rating for a country that refused to admit it owes money.

Again according to U.S. experts, China has laid out $1 billion for complete plants on a "progress" basis. This calls for 20% down payments and the rest, or most of it, on delivery.

No interest is charged on such payments, but this procedure enables the Chinese to make maximum use of their precious foreign exchange.

The Chinese have made generous use of short-term credits, ranging from 12 to 18 months, to finance massive grain imports from Australia, Canada and the United States. China suspended wheat purchases from the United States two years ago but now its need is such — food production failed to keep pace with population growth — that it may have to re-enter the American market.

This would be welcome news for U.S. wheat grower .

When the chips are down, the Chinese Communists have demonstrated that they can play the capitalist game with the best of the West. Consider, for example, the operations of the Bank of China, Peking's foreign banking arm.

At the end of last year, according to the Swiss-based Bank for International Settlements, the Bank of China owed $301 million to commercial banks in 1t leading advanced countries. But closer examination disclosed that the bulk of this amount merely represented deposits required by the Bank of China's correspondent relationship with the Western banks.

Chinese festival reveres moon

Hong Kong (UPI) — The Chinese have a thing about the moon.

According to legend, a renowned poet of the Tang Dynasty (618-907 A.D.), Li Tai Po, who glorified the moon as much as he did the oriental version of moonshine, was said to have tried to embrace the reflection of the moon on the river one drunken night and drowned himself in the process.

The moon is particularly idolized during the annual "-moon Festival," which in Chinese is called the Mid-Autumn Festival. It is perhaps second only to Chinese New Year in the fervor that goes into its celebration.

It fell on Thursday night, Sept. 27, this year. Legend has it that the earth's satellite is the brightest and roundest that night.

Poets rhymed and musicians played, while children dashed about with candle-lit multicolored paper lanterns and stuffed themselves with candies and moon cakes. It's all part of the celebration.

The custom of hiring musicians to play on festival night has always been the luxury of the rich.

People who are less well off make do with transistor radios and cassettes, and join the crowds on hilltops and open spaces to see the moon.

In the countryside, the festival is perhaps closest in spirit to Thanksgiving Day in America. For those who had a good year, it is the time of the harvest moon, and marks a period of relaxation and abundance in the coming winter.

The festival is still a favorite among the 4.5 million urban residents of Hong Kong, but the moon cakes are not doing so well.

In the past few years, people have not bought as many moon cakes as they used to. The pie-like cakes, encrusted in pastry and stuffed with sweetened bean paste, ground lotus seeds and sesame, were once given in large quantities as gifts to promote harmony between relatives and friends.

"People are more budget conscious these days," said one cake dealer. "Besides, they give more cakes than anybody can eat and they all go to waste."

However, the dealer said, "if we don't overstock, if we sell a good portion of what we have ordered, there is still a handsome profit to be made."

Washington (UPI) — A federal grand jury indicted a second Korean-born businessman in its Capitol Hill bribery investigation Tuesday, charging he ran a covert influence-peddling scheme called "Operation White Snow" with $600,000 in Korean CIA money.

Following up on its earlier indictment of fugitive millionaire Tongsun Park, the grand jury handed up a two-count indictment — involving 25 overt acts — for conspiracy to fraud and false declaration against Hancho C. Kim, a naturalized U.S. citizen now living in Lanham, Md.

Both indictments stem from the Justice Department's probe of allegations that the South Koreans, during the 1970s, plied members of Congress with cash, gifts, sex, lavish parties and other favors in an effort to win passage of legislation favorable to Seoul.

As in the Park indictment, the grand jury accused Kim of direct links to the KCIA and thus tied the alleged bribery effort to official South Korean government organs.

But unlike the earlier indictment, it did not name any of the congressmen who allegedly accepted money and gifts and said only that some of Kim's funds were intended for distrubution to "members of Congress."

Park, a millionaire rice dealer and former Washington socialite, is in South Korea and thus far has refused to return to the United States to face his 36-count indictment for conspiracy, defrauding the government, mail fraud, racketeering and making illegal political contributions.

Kim, however, is an American citizen residing in a Washington suburb. He is in the cosmetics business and is a former trustee of American University in the District of Columbia.

His Washington attorney, David Povich, declined to comment until he had seen the indictment, and said he had advised Kim to do the same.

The indictment charges him with conspiring with two former KCIA agents to defraud the U.S. government by conducting "a clandestine operation in the United States called 'Operation White Snow' for the purposes of increasing foreign aid to the Republic of Korea" and creating "a favorable attitude towards the government of the Republic of Korea and its officials."

It said the KCIA provided Kim $600,000 in 1974-75 and that he "entertained congressmen, received and stored KCIA funds, operated a Telex machine and received instructions from and sent information to the KCIA."

The indictment said Kim's illegal operation ran from August, 1974, to about April, 1976. It named as his unindicted co-conspirators Gen. Yang Doo Wan, then assistant to the KCIA director in Seoul, and Sang Keun Kim, then a KCIA agent in the United States and Kim's go-between with Seoul.

Girl 'loved to death'

Houston (UPI) — A mother dressed her young daughter in a pretty blue pullover shirt with gold cross necklace and then stabbed her 21 times with a six-inch kitchen knife, police said Monday.

Demeterica G. Peterson, 7, died at the scene Sunday. The mother, Cora Peterson, 37, was charged with murder.

The father, Lester Peterson, 27, said his wife telephoned him at work Sunday and told him to come home immediately.

When he arrived, Peterson said, he found his wife in a bloodstained white housecoat and pink gown and quoted her as saying, "The Lamb is slain." When he asked where their daughter was, she said, "Gone to glory."

In a bedroom, Peterson said he found his daughter dead of an estimated 21 stab wounds.

He said he took his wife to a neighbor's house to await police. He said his wife told him she killed the child as a "sacrifice" in obedience to "Scriptures," which she quoted as saying:

"Whatever was removed from the world would be returned twicefold by God."

A neighbor, Geneva Young, 61, described Mrs. Peterson as "what you would call a very religious person" devoted to her daughter.

"She loved her to death," Mrs. Young said.

Mrs. Young and other neighbors said they understood Mrs. Peterson had been suffering from some mental health problem in recent months.

Foreign military aid helps trade problems

(c) Washington Star

Washington — The United States and the Soviet Union have followed parallel courses in recent years of pushing up foreign military sales in order to earn hard currency to cover import costs.

This is indicated by a comparison of U.S. arms sales commitments with figures contained in a new Central Intelligence Agency report on military sales and economic aid by Communist countries to economically less developed countries.

The report shows an expansion of Soviet arms sales to third world countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America. "The large hard-currency earnings and additional assured supplies of certain strategic ran materials have put Moscow actively into the arms merchant class," the report says.

U.S. weapons sales also have grown rapidly during the 1970s. Providing oil-rich countries, sch as Iran and Saudi Arabia, with weapons was seen by the Nixon and Ford Administrations as a way of offsetting higher oil import bills since the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries began raising oil prices in 1973.

The Carter administration has said it intends to reduce foreign military sales substantially in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. But so far, administration spokesmen add, old commitments and new emergencies have made it impossible to make noticeable cuts.

The CIA report said that in 1976 the Soviet Union concluded agreements to provide $2.45 billion worth of military equipment to less devleoped countries.

The roughly comparable figure for U.S. foreign military sales was $8.66 billion for the 1976 fiscal year. Some developed countries are among purchasers included in Pentagon statistics.

Soviet military supplies for Ethiopia this year are expected to keep the 1977 Kremlin commitments roughly the same as last year, while U.S. sales are expected to be $8.77 billion in the fiscal year that ends Friday.

Moscow offers "fast delivery, a willingness to sell sophisticated weapons systems to almost any less developed country, and somewhat smaller price tags than for comparable Western equipment," the CIA report said.

Soviet sales are usually made from existing stocks — often weapons that are obsolete for the Soviet Union's own armed forces. The Pentagon sells the same weapons it orders for the U.S. military. In some controversial cases it was even cut into U.S. needs in order to provide the latest armaments to politically favored customers.

The CIA report pointed out that "the value of Soviet military commitments was almost triple economic pledges" in 1976. It gave economic aid promises by Moscow as worth $875 million.

U.S. Economic aid promises during the 1976 fiscal year was $3.88 billion, closer to double than triple military sales. In fiscal 1977, U.S. aid is estimated to rise to $5.72 billion, or almost two-thirds of expected military sales.

Eastern Europe promised $496 million of economic aid in 1976 and China $108 million. China was town by political strife and economic disruption after a severe earthquake last year as its aid commitments fell to the lowest level since 1969.

Mexican poppy fields succumb to air assault

San Jose Del Llano, Mexico (AP) — Helicopter XC-GID shuddered and bucked as pilot Carlos Aguilar Lomeli, hunting opium-producing poppy fields, coaxed it up a windy canyon high in the Sierra Madre Mountains.

Four-hundred feet above, flying backup in another Bell 212, Juan Flores watched Lomeli's machine laboring in the thin air, its cargo hold filled with a plastic tank containing 250 gallons of gramoxone herbicide.

With the 40-foot spray boom barely skimming the tops of pine trees, Lomeli suddenly found himself over a one-acre clearing filled with 2½ foot high crimson flowers.

For five seconds herbicide drained from the helicopter. It would leave the field, about 350 miles south of Columbus, N.M., chemically burned in 36 hours.

Lomeli and Flores are agents of the Mexican attorney general's office and part of a 250-person, 18-helicopter task force waging a ground and aerial war against opium poppies.

The poppies come into season in the spring and fall here, the periods of maximum rainfall.

The task force, with support from the army, covers a four state area stretching from the southern end of Sonora and Chihuahua, which border Arizona, New Mexico and Texas in the north, down through the coastal state of Sinaloa, bordering Sonora on the south, and parts of Durango, east of Sinaloa.

The man who heads the task force in the area, designated as Region Six, is Carlos Aguilar Garza.

Aguilar Garza, who is headquartered in Culiacan, says the area is by far Mexico's largest producers of opium, the source of heroin.

U.S. drug enforcement officials, who fly with the Mexican crews as observers, say the area accounts for a major portion of the heroin sold in the United States. Mexico has become the main supplier of heroin in the States.

When the poppies are in season, Aguilar Garza's pilots fly seven days a week, working out of bases such as this one, about 80 miles north of Culiacan.

The area to which Lomeli and Flores were assigned recently was in southern Chihuahua, about 50 miles north of San Jose Del Llano, where mountain ridges top 10,000 feet.

Looking down from Flores' helicopter dozens of poppy fields could be seen ranging from about one-eighth of an acre to two acres.

The fields are easily distinguishable, their lettuce coloring and crimson flowers providing sharp contrast to surrounding vegetation.

There were no roads where the recent spraying took place, although occasional huts and footpaths were visible from the air.

"People are down there all right," said Flores. "They take off for cover when they hear the sound of a helicopter.

"A few days ago, not too far from here, somebody opened up on one of the spray helicopters with a machine gun," he said.

"One observer was hit in the arm and we counted 11 bullet holes in the machine."

Many of the pilots wear body armor. All are armed, and the observation helicopters sometimes carry soldiers who may land and try to arrest the growers.

Aguilar Garza said the poppy fields are planted by peasants at the bidding of narcotics traffickers. He said the peasants, who are responsible for handing over the opium gum the plants yield, can earn $2,000 to $3,000 a year, although they face penalties beginning with a minimum sentence of more than five years, in jail without possibility of parole.

He said that when poppies are not in season, the same peasants may grow marijuana.

"It's a simple matter of economics," he said. "Many of the peasants believe they have no other means of income.

"We know that spraying the fields and arresting people isn't going to solve the problem. The government is moving to find other industries that can be offered to the growers as a substitute."

Aguilar Garza said "the peasants never use drugs themselves, and may not be aware of the dangers they pose to others."

He said about 1,300 persons are arrested on narcotics charges in his region each year, and that the jails "are crammed full of narcotics offenders."

Cruz Lopez Garza, Aguilar Garza's second in command, said it takes about 35 acres of flowers to produce 22 pounds of opium gum, which will yield about 2.2 pounds, or 1 kilo, of pure heroin.

New York City police say a kilo of pure heroin is cut seven to eight times before it reaches the street, where the end product currently costs about $2.5 million a kilo.

Lopez Garza said that in the first 22 days of September, the aerial campaign resulted in the destruction of 2,341 separate fields, totaling about 600 acres.

"We estimate we're destroying about 86 per cent of the fields," Lopez Garza said. "The ones that aren't destroyed are the ones we don't see."

Alabama grand jury indicts avowed racist for bombing

Birmingham, Ala. (UPI) — A grand jury has indicted an avowed racist Georgia lawyer for a 1958 black church bombing in Birmingham, and more indictments will be sought for other racial bombings in addition to a murder indictment already returned, sources said Tuesday.

Sources said the indictment was sent to officials in Marietta, Ga., to be served on J.B. Stoner, director of the National States Rights Party. There was confirmation from Georgia officials that the indictment had been forwarded.

Stoner was indicted Monday for the 1958 bombing of the black Bethel Baptist Church in Birmingham, sources said. No one was injured in that blast.

Stoner said he expected to be arrested shortly and would fight extradition to Alablama. "I'm not guilty," he said.

After his arrest, Stoner said he would file a habeas corpus petition, naming an undercover FBI agent and Birmingham police detective who allegedly tried to recruit him in 1957 for the bombing of Bethel Baptist Church, whose minister, the Rev. Fred L. Shuttleswoth, was a black civil rights leader.

"This same undercover agent wanted me to arrange for the killing of Martin Luther King (Jr.). This was about 1957," Stoner said. At the time, King, who was slain in 1968 in Memphis, Tenn., was pastor of a church in Montgomery, Ala.

"He insisted that I find a good marksman to kill King — they wanted it done by rifle," Stoner said.

He said he didn't know why the men also wanted the Birmingham church bombed. "I know I didn't have anything to do with it," Stoner said.

Former Ku Klux Klansman Robert Chambliss, 73, was indicted by the same grand jury Monday on four counts of first degree murder for the 1963 bombing of the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church. He was arrested at his home and held without bond.

But attorney Arthur Hanes Jr. Tuesday prepared a writ of habeus corpus to file in Jefferson County Circuit Court asking why Chambliss was being held.

Four young black girls were killed in the Sept. 15, 1963, dynamite blast.

"We're going to plead not guilty," said Hanes, whose father once represented James Earl Ray, convicted assassin of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Stoner accused Alabama Attorney General William J. Baxley, who last February reopened the investigation into the bombings, of seeking votes for his campaign for governor next year.

"Bill Baxley is willing to do anything, destroy anybody he can to get the nigger bloc vote," Stoner said from Marietta.

Stoner questioned whether he could be legally charged with the bombing since it occurred so long ago. But Alabama law exempts any capital offenses from limitations on when they can be prosecuted. Bombing an inhabited building is a capital crime.

Romeo, where art thou honored in native city?

Verona, Italy (AP) — This historic city where, in legend and tale, Romeo Montecchi and Juliet Cappelletti loved and died, adores its heroine and ignores its hero.

The city itself is billed as "the city of Juliet.". The house that is billed as lore is a well-preserved national monument and a museum, as is the tomb everyone says is hers. No such honors are accorded to Romeo as the man who is said to have died for her.

"I don't think there ever was a conscious plan to downgrade Romeo," says Bruno Decesco, a local Romeo and Juliet historian. "But there is no doubt he has been doomed to a secondary role."

Decesco, also the drama critic of the local daily newspaper L'Arena, said Romeo's less prominent role may have been due to the fact that historians found it more difficult to uncover his past than Juliet's.

After all, one local argument goes, the central personality in the celebrated love tragedy should be Juliet because, as Decesco noted, "history is full of heroes but not enough heroines; we are all Romeos, and Juliets are not too many."

The house where Romeo reputedly lived is a decaying, nondescript 14th century building.

Unlike his, Juliet's house is a restored edifice, with the balcony intact, bought by the state in an auction at the beginning of this century. Looked after by two full-time custodians, it's also a far cry from the condition that Charles Dickens found it as "a most miserable little inn, the yard ankle-deep in dirt and a grim-visaged dog viciously panting in a doorway who would certainly have had Romeo by the leg."

Quotations from William Shakespeare's play adorn its stone walls ("It is my lady; O, it is my love") with the 10-year-old bronze statue of what Veronese call "the most beautiful and high-spirited maiden," in the cobblestone yard. The complex attracts 1,000 visitors a day. In Shakespeare's plays, the couple's names were Romeo Montague and Juliet Capulet.

The Juliet crowd, young and old lovers and the curious, then crosses the town to the tomb, or, as Shakespeare had it, "A grave? O, no; a lantern."

Although history books question if the tomb is really hers, its custodian says:

"To these people it doesn't matter. They are not skeptical historians; they are lovers, believers."

The belief in love triumphed over historical facts to such a degree that the tomb's previous custodian achieved fame through his worldwide correspondence with lovers and advice to them until his retirement 20 years ago. Letters have since died out.

Doubts also exist, despite mass pilgrimage by the faithful, of the veracity of the love story, first recounted by a 16th century count, Luigi da Porto.

It was in da Porto's account that Romeo of the Nontecchis and Juliet of the Cappellittis fell in love despite hatred between their families. They marry in secret. When Juliet's family is about to wed her to a local dignitary, she takes a powder designed to make her look dead so she can later escape from the grave and join her Romeo.

But Romeo, seeing her in the grave, believes she took her own life to prevent her marriage to another man and takes poison himself. Juliet awakens to tell a dying Romeo that her death was a make-believe one. Romeo dies in her lap and Juliet then takes her own life.

Shakespeare, never a Verona visitorn took up the theme in 1596, or 60 years after da Porto.

How true is the story? Says Tullio Lenotti, author of a book on the histoy of the love story:

"Historians, critics and learned men may well decide, unanioously, that da Porto's story was only the fruit of his imagination. But they have yet to succeed, and never will succeed, in destroying its basis, which is the exhaltation of a love faithful even onto death, a theme which made, and will always make, the heart beat faster."

Car-truck crashes bring renewed study

Washington (AP) — The growing number of small cars on the roads has increased the risk of automobiles sliding underneath trucks during rear-end crashes, and the government is considering updating its safety regulations to lessen the danger.

Federal officials say there may be as many as 40,000 such accidents in the United States every year, killing 200 to 300 persons and injuring another 8,000.

Existing regulations aimed at preventing the cars from sliding under the trucks were written 25 years ago and apply only to commercial trucks in interstate and foreign commerce. They require the trucks to be equipped with a protective device constructed so that clearance from the ground is not more than 30 inches when the truck is empty. The rear of the vehicle cannot extend more than 24 inches beyond the device and the sides cannot extend more than 18 inches.

"The question now is whether these rear-end protective requirements are adequate and should be extended to additional vehicles," said the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

In considering the question again, the NHTSA is looking for comments and suggestions from the public. The deadline is Nov. 20. Write to the docket room of the Bureau of Motor Carrier Safety, Room 3402, 400 Seventh St. SW, Washington, D.C., 20590.

'Sybil' star Davis to get movie lead

Los Angeles (AP) — Former Broadway actor Brad Davis has signed for a leading role in "Midnight Express" for Columbia Pictures.

Davis starred in the TV movie "Sybil" and had a major role in "Roots" as the friendly overser.

He will play Billy Hayes in the film, based on the book about Hayes' experiences in a Turkish prison and his escape.

Iowa talk is planned by Anita Bryant

Des Moines, Iowa (AP) — A spokesman for an organization in charge of an Oct. 14 Anita Bryant concert says the singer will not carry her Florida anti-homosexual fight to Des Moines.

"She will be speaking on no controversial subject here," said James Noe, president of New World Inc., in an interview. "She will be presenting a family program of sacred and patriotic music."

Vegas gambler traits shared

Las Vegas, Nev. (AP) — The typical Las Vegas gambler is from the West, over 40 years old, drives a car to the desert city, is married and not quite as well educated as the non-gambling visitor, a new survey shows.

The survey by two University of Nevada-Las Vegas professors is based on random interviews with 2,000 tourists entering this glittering gaming mecca.

Marketing professors Lawrence Dandurand and Henry Sciullo developed the survey to provide casino operators with what they call "a refined understanding of different target groups in a casino gambling market."

The research project shows two-thirds of those surveyed are gamblers while the others claim they are not. More of the gamblers than non-gamblers are repeat customers, too, the study shows.

The report doesn't say what gamblers spend while playing cards, rolling dice or pumping coins into slot machines. But it indicates visitors to Las Vegas — gamblers and non-gamblers alike — spend an average $71 a day for non-gaming goods and services.

The survey says gamblers tend to be more motivated than non-gamblers by entertainment, vacations, "get-away" time, climate, change of pace and the 24-hour excitement of Las Vegas.

On the other hand, non-gamblers are more likely to be in Las Vegas out of curiosity, to visit friends or relatives, for sightseeing or for business and conventions, the survey says.

The survey says a greater proportion of women than men tend to include themselves among the gamblers, even though 58 per cent of all visitors surveyed were men. Sixty-eight per cent of the women visitors describe themselves as gamblers, compared with 64 per cent of the men.

More than half the visitors surveyed were over 40, and more than two-thirds were married.

The survey also suggests gamblers tend to have completed less education than non-gamblers. Twenty-four per cent of the non-gamblers were college graduates while 20 per cent of the gamblers were grads.

The survey also indicates there is no significant difference between gamblers and non-gamblers with regard to income. About a third from both groups make $15,000 to $25,000 — the biggest single category.

The survey also shows the gamblers' category has higher proportions of self-employed persons, housewives, retirees and factory workers, while non-gamblers tend more to be professionals, managers, teachers, students and military personnel.

More than half of the visitors questioned were from the West, the survey shows, with the next highest group, 21 per cent, from the Midwest. And more than half come to Las Vegas by car, the survey shows, a third by plane and the rest by bus.

Essential learning skills testing to be continued in Lincoln schools

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

A testing program for such essential skills as spelling, adding and subtracting will continue in its second year with a few modifications, Lincoln Board of Education members learned Tuesday.

The essential learning skills tests are given to students after the teacher thinks a child has mastered a skill, explained Eleanor Francke, administrative assistant in instruction.

Testing for the skills is begun in the fifth grade, but some students may not master some of the skills until the ninth grade, she said during the Tuesday board meeting.

The testing program, mandated by the State Education Department, includes reading a 2,000 word selection, proofreading and copying a series of sentences, spelling 1,000 frequently used words, writing a paragraph, adding, subtracting, multiplying, dividing, locating information in the library and on a map.

Under State Education Department rules, every school district must define what every student should know and then test. But the tests cannot be used for grade promotion or graudation requirements.

The defined skills must continue to be taught until the student can demonostrate that he has learned them, explained Ron Brandt, associate superintendent of intruction.

The original essential skills test given to students last year, was reworked using suggestions which came from about two-thirds of the schools, Ms. Franke said.

Only one, hotly-debated suggestion was not followed, she said. Students must still say three digit numbers correctly — five hundred sixty five, not five hundred and sixty five, she said.

"I thought that was splitting hairs. But I lost," Brandt said.

The school system will be working on essential skills for testing at the secondary level, a more difficult undertaking, Brandt said.

Who is going to administer the test and who is going to teach the skill a student hasn't mastered are questions that will be difficult to answer, he said.

These tests will show to others that school children are learning, saida Pearl Goldenstein, board president. But she also expressed concern about the time teachers spent in giving these individual tests, time that could be spent teaching instead.

Eventually, the testing program will be able to give board members information on the percentage of students at each grade level who have mastered the essential skill items, Supt. John Prasch said.

The new math book series is being used in 29 of the 33 elementary schools this fall, Ron Massie, mathematics consultant, told board members.

The Scott Foresman and Company math program, selected after more than one year of study, has received enthusiastic response from teachers and students, Massie said.

"The books are just neat, the pictures and the problems," said Williamette Shafer, whose sixth grade son is using the series this year.

Board members also discussed a rewritten draft of the district's special education policy. New policy wording will allow the district to design individual programs for handicapped students. The programs would be finished before the student is 21.

Without this language the district will be responsible for that student until he is 21, Edwin Perry, school attorney told the board.

The language is not an attempt to "weasle our way out" of a legal obligation, but an attempt not to take on more than is our legal obligation," he said.

Because of new state and federal laws, local school districts have assumed more educational responsiblity for handicapped children in recent years.

All of the cost of these expensive programs are not reimbursed, Prasch pointed out.

Vandalism problems at the Southwood Club house, a unior high school bus stop, led to a discussion on student responsibilities.

"If that's the way they're going to behave I don't think we have any responsibility to transport them, Mrs. Shafer said.

Southwood Clubhouse board members have asked that the bus stop be moved to the Hill School, a solution that no board members found favorable.

"I don't want them over at Hill pestering those little kids," Mrs. Shafer said.

One solution, Prasch said, might be to make several bus tops and thus break up the youths into smaller groups.

"We have found that when we have a large number of children who have nothing to do but wait for a bus, we create a bad siutation," he said.

Diplomats doubt Soviets for war

Washington (AP) — Two former U.S. ambassadors to the Soviet Union agreed Tuesday that Soviet leaders do not want a nuclear war with the United States.

George Kennan and Foy D. Kohler also expressed doubt that Russia is interested in territorial expansion, with the possible exception of incorporating Bulgaria within its boundaries.

They told a House International Relations subcommittee, however, that they believe the Soviet Union would like to hang onto the control of Eastern Europe and extend its influence "with minimum responsibility."

"They don't want a war, but would like to have some of the fruits of war without war," Kohler testified at a hearing on political, military, social and economic forces at work in the Soviet Union.

In its military buildup, Kohler said Russia is intent on assuring that in another confrontation like the Cuban missile crisis it would be the United States, not the Soviet Union, that would have to back down.

Kennan, who had three diplomatic tours in Russia before being assigned ambassador in 1952, said strategic arms limitation negotiations should be accompanied by "some measure of unilateral restraint on both sides in the development of new weapons systems."

But Kohler, ambassador to Russia from 1962 to 1966, said he was convinced "unilateral example never works with the Russians."

Man armed with knife takes $30 in robbery

A 20-year-old Lincoln man told police he was robbed of $30 at knifepoint Tuesday near 25th and P Sts.

The man, Rodney Dale Spider of 2944 S St., suffered minor cuts to the hand, forehead and stomach in a scuffle with a man who displayed a knife and demanded money, he told police.

Police were looking for a suspect, a black male, about 6 feet tall and slender, wearing a sleeveless blue denim jacket and blue jeans, and riding a blue 10-speed bicycle.

The man removed three $10 bills from Spider's wallet and fled on the bicycle, Spider told police.

Ag official pleads Imperial Valley case

By Philip Shabecoff
(c) New York Times

Washington — An assistant secretary of agriculture with substantial land holdings in California's Imperial Valley has approached members of Congress, White House officials and other members of the Carter administration seeking special treatment for the area in the enforcement of a federal water resources law.

Robert H. Meyer, assistant secretary of agriculture for marketing, acknowledged in a telephone interview Tuesday that he has been talking to other government officials about his belief that the Imperial Valley should be exempt from a 1902 land reclamation law. The statute provides that water for irrigation from federal water projects can go only to farmers holding 160 acres or less and living on their property.

Meyer insisted, however, that there was no conflict of interest involved in his activities on behalf of the Imperial Valley. He said that he never discussed government policy during his contacts with members of Congress and the administration but only talked about his own "personal problems."

Meyer said that Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland told him that he could talk about the issue as "an individual" provided he did not discuss administration policy on the issue.

"Everybody knows that I am a family farmer in the Imperial Valley," he said, adding, "President Carter stayed at my home there."

Bergland was out of Washington and could not be reached immediately for comment. However, Tom Sand, Bergland's press secretary, said by telephone that "he (Meyer) was warned that he could not speak on this as a private citizen."

Asked for comment about Meyer, Rex Granum, the deputy White House press secretary, said: "We just don't have that much information. So we don't have any reason to feel that the secretary has done anything improper. It's late in the day. We have confidence that the Agriculture Department will respond to your query and confident that it will bring to our attention anything that they think merits attention."

Farmers in the Imperial Valley had been exempt from the land reclamation law which, in addition to limiting to 160 acres holdings that could receive precious federal water resources, also requires that the land be occupied by the farmer. The law was intended to encourage family farming. Under the law, a farmer and his wife together may own 360 acres and still be entitled to water.

In 1933, according to those familiar with the issue, the outgoing secretary of interior in the Hoover administration wrote an administrative opinion that the Imperial Valley was exempt from the law because it had private water resources coming in before the federal water project was built. In fact, it was said, the law was rarely enforced and many large land holders received what was often described as a subsidy in the form of free water from federally constructed water projects.

Recently, however, the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the law and ruled that it did apply to the Imperial Valley. The Interior Department is preparing regulations to enforce the law.

The law also requires that land in excess of the 160 acres must be sold off or federal water would be shut off. Many of the farmers in the area, including Meyer, have far more than that amount of land.

In the telephone interview, Meyer said that he and his wife together owned 900 acres, his wife owns another 640, two small children own 380 acres and three older children are purchasing 160 acres. In addition, he said, he is leasing 600 acres owned by his mother-in-law.

The land is now held in a blind trust, as required by conflict-of-interest regulations. However, Meyer said that if the Imperial Valley was subject to the law he would be "personally impacted."

"That is why I can speak of my personal problems — because I may be bankrupt," he said. He noted that he paid over $1,500 an acre for his land but had read recently in a local newspaper that if the 1902 law were enforced, land values in his area would fall to $750 an acre.

Violent crime rate drops 4%

Washington (AP) — An 8% decrease in murders and a 10% drop in robberies reduced the nation's incidence of violent crime by 4% in 1976, according to the FBI.

However, the total for all serious offenses, including nonviolent acts such as auto theft, rose by just less than 1% — compared with an overall hike of 10% a year earlier.

The FBI statistics, gleaned from more than 13,000 law enforcement agencies across the nation, showed an average of one murder every 75 minutes last year.

Panel on child abuse to report

A task force is expected to suggest late this week that a full-time professional be hired to oversee and coordinate child abuse services in Lincoln and Lancaster County.

The professional would work toward coordination among various sources of child abuse services: the Public Welfare Department, police, county attorney, hospitals, physicians and private agencies, according to Jerrold Aspengren, chairman of the Child Abuse Task Force.

The task force, created last fall by city and county governments, expires Oct. 1. The panel will present its suggestions to the mayor and county commissioners in preliminary form, and ask for a 60-day extension to get its report in final form, Aspengren said.

The report from the 18-member group also will urge that an advisory committee on child abuse be established, Aspengren said. The committee, consisting of laypersons and professionals, would advise the mayor and commissioners.

A second committee, made up of professionals serving child abuse victims, also would be established. That committee would meet regularly to determine if needed services are being provided, Aspengren said.

Investing in bonds not riskless venture

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant
Quinn

New York — If you're among the thundering herd that's had it with stocks, consider the possibilities with bonds.

They are not without risk. If inflation picks up and long-term interest rates rise, the value of bonds will drop. You'd still receive regular interest payments, but if you had to sell the bond you'd get less than you paid for it. On the other hand, if inflation slows and interest rates fall, your bond would increase in value.

Bonds, in other words, are not "safe." To give you an idea of the market risks, consider what happened to the total return from bonds in 1974: As measured by the Merrill Lynch taxable bond indices, the return fell at an annual rate of 23.3% in the second quarter of the year, then rose 32.7% in the fourth quarter. With swings like that, you can't very well park money in bonds for short periods. The only safe investments would be savings accounts or short-term government securities.

But, if the long-term inflation cycle slows over the 10 to 20 years, long-term bonds may be money-makers. Some investment tips:

(1) Long-term bonds (maturing in 20 to 30 years) have higher yields than intermediate-term bonds (5 to 10 years), because long-term holders run more risk. If inflation resumes, the price of long-term bonds will fall more rapidly than the price of intermediates. Therefore, intermediates are a better hedge against the chance of reinflation. But if inflation moderates in the years ahead, long-term bonds will have a higher payoff.

(2) Corporate and utility bonds have "sinking funds" that redeem the bond issue on a predetermined schedule, usually starting five to 10 years from the date of issue. If bond prices have fallen, the company will try to retire its quota of bonds each year by buying them in the open market. But if bond prices are up, the corporation will redeem (or "call") the bonds by lottery-drawing the numbers of certain bonds and requiring the holders to turn them in. You're paid at face value, generally $1,000, but no longer have that nice, high-interest investment.

If interest rates fall, a corporation may sell a new bond issue and use the proceeds to redeem some older, higher-interest bonds (a process called "refunding").

If a bond is called in via refunding, you're generally paid the face value plus a small premium to compensate for loss of interest. But that's not the same as having a high interest payment locked in for 20 years.

Government bonds pay slightly less interest than corporates. But they don't have sinking funds and may not be called for 20 years or more. If you buy governments, you can lock up high interest income for a long time.

(3) The face value, or "par value," of bonds is generally $1,000. If you buy in small amounts (less than $100,000), by all means stick to well-known and widely traded bonds; if there's not a lot of market demand, you might not be able to sell except at a big price discount. The best bets for small investors are mutual funds specializing in bonds, or the bond unit trusts sold by the large brokerage houses.

(4) The highest current income is paid by bonds selling at a "premium" (more than $1,000). But there's a higher risk that these bonds will be called away by the company. The next highest income is paid by bonds newly issued by the company.

The lowest current income is paid by "discount" bonds (selling for less than $1,000). One key attraction of discount bonds has been that, when they're turned in at maturity, the difference between what you paid and the $1,000 redemption price is a capital gain.

New denture concept widens error margin

Edwardsville, Ill. (UPI) — An assistant professor at Southern Illinois University is experimenting with a new two-hour method of making false teeth.

Gregory P. Stewart says the new dentures, manufactured by the Acry-Dent Supply Co. in Michigan, has teeth already imbedded in it. When placed in the patient's mouth, the material conforms to gum structure for a perfect fit.

Stewart says the process takes about two hours and would cost less than $500.

However, Stewart says the new technique demands that the upper and lower plates be in perfect alignment with each other and the gums.

Thus, the technique results in a greater margin of error by dentists already suffering from malpractice insurance increases.

Police woman model against uniformed duty

Red Bluff, Calif. (AP) — June Lang, one of the inspirations for the NBC television show "Police Woman," doesn't think female officers should be in the field in uniform.

Mrs. Lang, who began her 20-year career with the Los Angeles Police Department in 1951, now lives on a Northern California ranch and rarely sees the show, which isn't aired in her area.

"Police Woman" portrays actress Angie Dickinson as Pepper Anderson, a plainclothes detective who gets into many tense scrapes.

Mrs. Lang says the show inspires women to go into police work, which she describes as "a beautiful job" as long as women realize it's not all glamor and excitement.

Mrs. Lang, one of the first LAPD women to do plainclothes intelligence, burglary, organized crime and homicide work, says:

"To send a woman out on patrol in uniform, I just don't feel they can do a dangerous job unless they have a backup team. So why send them in the first place unless it is an ego trip for the women?"

When the "Police Woman" show began as a spinoff of the "Police Story" series four years ago, producer Doug Benton said Mrs. Lang served as a consultant because "she was a legend at LAPD, she was so good."

Now Mrs. Lang, whose daughter, Vicki, works in the LAPD child abuse unit, has no consulting role on the show and only sees it when she travels to an area where it is aired.

While she says the show interests women in becoming policewomen, she adds LAPD Chief Ed Davis told her some female applicants now want "a job like Angie Dickinson."

"People think 'If I got on the force, I'd have a job like that.' It's not true. There are routine jobs to be done. There are many boring, long, hard cases," said Mrs. Lang, whose husband Jim is a former LAPD lieutenant who is now a Tehama County justice court judge.

Doc Birdbath attributes talent to bottom teeth

Vacaville, Calif. (AP) — He was once the voice behind Tarzan's Cheetah when the little chimp squealed.

He was the howling coyote in Cecil B. DeMille's "The Crusaders."

And he did the special effects — all the squawks and jungle sounds — for Martin Denny's "Quiet Village" album.

The name in the telephone book and on his mailbox in this rural Sacramento Valley town is Dr. Horatio Q. Birdbath.

That's a stage name which comic musician Spike Jones gave Purves Pullen 32 years ago, and his friends still know him as "Doc."

At 68, the one-man menagerie who did the bird and hyena calls on "Love in Bloom" and dozens of other zany numbers with Spike Jones and His City Slickers is still whistling for his supper.

But now the pace is much slower than the year he made 324 one-night stands across the nation with the City Slickers, including one performance at the White House.

Birdbath sells toys and performs with his "Nut Tree Puppets" at a popular roadside restaurant on the freeway between San Francisco and Reno.

For amusement, he takes his dogless leash for a walk around town, startling passersby with his ventriloquist barks.

Birdbath left Jones' road company in 1956. But he continued recording with the City Slickers for another decade, and he has used his unique ability to produce bird calls and animal noises in numerous other recording and motion picture jobs.

His tour de force was his rendition of "Let's All Sing Like the Birdies Sing," which he says he performed more than 2,000 times, starting with the Ben Bernie band in the 1930s.

Birdbath attributes his talent to one of his bottom teeth, which he says is about one-sixteenth of an inch out of line.

"One of my big breaks came when I was 17," he says. "I went with my high school principal to an ornithologists' society meeting. She started imitating various bird calls, and unbeknownst to the ornithologists, the birds answering her in the distance were really me.

"Finally, she said, 'Would you like to meet the birds themselves?' and I came out flapping my hands. Everybody cracked up. Then I went through 33 bird calls and got 31 authentically perfect."

In recent years, Birdbath has stuck closer to his Northern California home and his puppet theater, but he still does a few sound effects, such as the barking dog on a San Francisco radio station.

"For me the main thing in life is to be out making people happy," Birdbath said. "And as long as you stay busy seven days a week, you won't let your mind rot on you."

Even Burt's tired of 'good ole boy' films

Los Angeles (AP) — Burt Reynolds' new film is something a bit different. He explains: "If I played just one more 'good ole boy,' everybody was going to throw up."

Not necessarily. His current G.O.B. vehicle, "Smokey and the Bandit," has proved the purprise hit of the summer, Universal's biggest moneymaker since "Jaws."

"But I realize that after 22 years in the movie business, it was time I showed people I could do something besides Good Ole Boys in fast cars," he remarked.

The change of pace is "The End," which he is directing for United Artists with himself, his current girlfriend, Sally Field, plus a distinguished group: Myrna Loy, Pat O' Brien, Joanne Woodward, Dom DeLuise, Sam Jaffe.

"It's a black comedy, which is the most difficult kind of picture to pull off," said Renolds. "Either it works or it's a bomb. This script was originally written for Woody Allen, so you can see what kind of material it is."

The plot has Reynolds dying and not liking it. He wants to find out what dying is like, and he asks the incurably ill Jaffe. After a long pause, Jaffe replies, "It depends on what's on TV."

The other day, "The End" was filming in Malibu Canyon at a small college that was once the estate of director Clarence Brown. It portrays the psyciatric hospital where Reynolds is a patient. He was preparing a scene in which he tries to throw himself off the hospital tower. "During my years at MGM, I thought about it once or twice a year," said Brown when he visited the set.

"I'm taking chances with this picture, and I hope they work," remarked Reynolds. "For instance, a couple of days ago I shot a scene on a bench with Dom, 3½ minutes of conversation that had the crew rolling on the lawn.

"Now I've always thought that one of the reasons Cary Grant was so funny in all those comedies — aside from the fact that he was a master at comedy — was because he talked so fast. So I said to Dom, 'Let's do the same scene but talk fast.' We did it in two minutes, and I think now it's much better."

Black comedy has been compared to a high-wire act without a net. So why would Reynolds try one when he could be turning out one of his grits-and-chase films that are sure fire in the drive-in market?

A large part of the reason may the critics. Reynolds claims that reviewers' raps don't bug him, yet he can quote them at length. He cited a San Diego critic who carried on about how he hated himself for liking "Smokey and the Bandit." Also a local reviewer who managed to cover "The Longest Yard" without a comment about its star.

"I think the thing that bothers critics about me is that I don't seem to be acting," he observed. "That, to me, is the essence of good film acting. Gary Cooper did the same thing, and he rarely got credit for being a good actor. James Stewart the same."

Reynolds relished the story about how New Yorker critic Pauline Kael "made a pilgrimage of 2,000 miles to tell me that the only way I could save my career was to stop going on talk shows and give up those Deep South movies. So I went out and did 15 'Tonight Shows' and played five more good ole boys. She can't understand it.

"I tried changing my act. I became a song-and-dance man and did sparkling comedy. I thought I was terrific. No one else did."

He referred to that Hindenberg of musicals, "Let's Make Love." He is vocal about such disasters — "that's why they didn't want me on the Queen Mary." He attended the shipboard premiere of "Lucky Lady" and proceeded to tell the visiting press how rotten the movie was.

Reynolds is so self-deprecating that you wonder what he is proud of.

" 'Deliverance.' I believe that to be a classic in its field, akin to a 'Wages of Fear.'

" 'The Longest Yard.' People talk about 'Rocky' bringing back the sports movie. 'Rocky' had a nine-minute fight scene at the end; Bob Aldrich directed 45 minutes of football in 'The Longest Yard.' And the picture grossed $70 million."

Damage deposit deduction disputed

To ask a question, call 477-2121 or write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, Neb. 68501.

No deposit, no return

Can you tell me what is considered "normal wear and tear" of an apartment? My daughter and a friend occupied an apartment for two years and had paid a $200 damage deposit. When they moved out, we thoroughly cleaned the apartment and expected to get her deposit returned. Instead, the landlord presented her with a bill for $123.25 to redecorate the entire apartment, including a $23.25 charge to paint the outside doors. I feel the deduction is extremely unjust because we left the apartment clean.

J.L.B.,
Sterling

ACTION LINE: Ron Wylie, editor of the Legal Services Jounal of Legal Services of Southeast Nebraska, suggested you sit down with your landlord and attempt to reach a fair settlement. However, if an amicable agreement cannot be reached, your rights and those of your landlord are specified in the Landlord-Tenant Act. The law provides that money paid for rent and security be returned within 14 days, excepting those charges agreed to by both sides. If your deposit has been unfairly withheld, you might consider recovering the amount in small claims court. An attorney may also adivse you whether you are entitled to damages from your landlord. We suggest you seek a compromise with your landlord; otherwise you should decide whether to pursue other remedies.

One more time please

Last summer I sent a check to Book Digest to cover the cost of a one-year renewal and gift subscription. Instead of crediting my renewal for one year, they apparently advanced it from July to August 1977. Can you get this straightened out so I will not keep receiving notices?

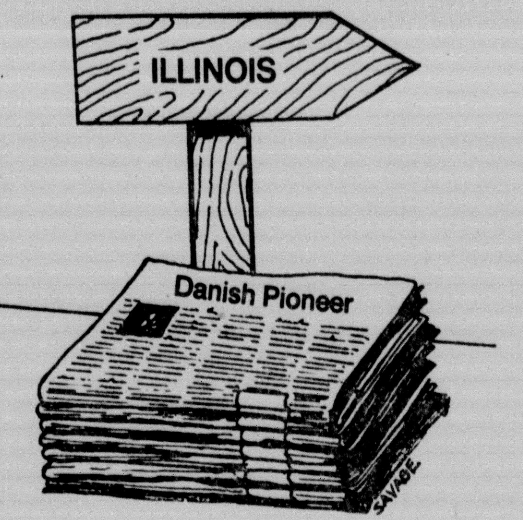
R. W. Ihmsen
Lincoln

ACTION LINE: A customer service spokesman for Book Digest told us he will re-examine your account and give you credit for your renewal. Keep us posted.

Coffee and Danish please

Can you tell me if the Danish Pioneer paper is still in existence? It was printed in Lincoln or Omaha I believe. It was spelled Danske Pioneer. I would like to subscribe if it is still printed.

C. T. Kofoed
Ben Somond, Calif.



ACTION LINE: You should be able to enjoy the Danish Pioneer over coffee by writing to the paper c/o 36 Conti Parkway, Elmwood Park, Ill., 60635. The paper is no longer printed in Omaha, a spokesman for the Omaha-based American Dane Magazine told us. You might be interested in that magazine, however, which also has articles about Denmark. The address is 3717 Harvey Street, Omaha, 69131.

Takes liberties with address

The National Emergency Civil Liberties Union was recently listed in the newspaper as co-counsel in the Yellowbird trial in Gordon. Can you give me the organization's address?

Philip Schwab,
Friend

ACTION LINE: A spokesman at the Nebraska chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union did not have that address immediately available. However, if you write the Civil Liberties Union at 1030 Q, Lincoln, 68501, the organization will try to assist you.

He found his true calling in square dances

West Falmouth, Maine (AP) — "There's your butterfly," Ron Libby told the 16 middle-age couples shuffling around the wooden floor. "Now you've also got an X. Squeeze your X. Now you've got an O."

The 36-year-old Libby, after careers as a rock band musician, fireman and insurance salesman, has finally found his true calling: calling square dances.

Libby, a lean, personable fellow with a black mustache and mod haircut, makes his living by hollering out instructions to an older generation — the millions of men and women, like those in his barn, who regularly go square dancing.

He's a fulltime, professional caller — one of about 100 in the country, he estimates — and his popularity can be measured by his calendar: he's booked nearly every weekend through 1980 at square dance gatherings throughout the country.

To be a top caller, making $150 a night and $500 to $700 or more for a weekend's work, "You've got to work very, very hard," Libby says. "Write material. Record records. They're paying you to provide a good time to them at their level."

There are eight levels of square dancing ability, ranging from the "mainstream" dancers, who can respond to about 75 calls, to "challenge 4" dancers, who know the steps to more than 500 calls.

With top challenge dancers, a caller will call not merely "square dances" but isoceles triangles, parallelograms, trapezoids. For these dancers, Libby prepares every call beforehand on cue cards.

"This is my workshop," he says, displaying a small, square board with chess-like figures upon it. He spends "a minimum of five hours every day" with the board, planning what he will call and "how to maneuver them (the dancers) out so they get back to their original partners."

In the last few months alone, Libby has called square dances in Houston, Chicago, even at the Pentagon.

Most new TV shows bum-rapped

San Francisco — Busy, busy telephones around the scatter. The teen-age world has been coming apart since Farrah Fawcett-Majors dropped out of "Charlie's Angels." A new chick replaces her.

"Well, what do you think though? I mean she's pretty and all that but —."

☆ ☆ ☆

The fall TV shows are on. Most of them being bum-rapped by the critics. Tough work being a critic. You have to be critical and people you criticize hate you for it.

"Well, you'd think the networks would learn. But they never seem to. Last night's showing of etc."

☆ ☆ ☆

One reason I believe new TV shows are so bad is the way they make them.

Some years ago, I did a complete taped show. What they call a "pilot." A model they hoped to sell. This pilot lost its bearings. But no matter.

"Nearly everybody is nervous facing the camera for the first time," said the director. "But there is nothing to be nervous about. The idea is we want you to be comfortable. Are you comfortable?"

I said: "Hell, no."

The director chuckled. "That's a very funny line," he said. "Not that we could keep it in the show. Offend the church groups and so on. Television is not as loose as newspapers. We have to be careful of the mass audience.

"Now," said the director. "Be comfortable." He walked over to the camera and patted it familiarly. "Think of it as just a box. What can it do to you?"

The director said to me: "Just look at the box. What can it do to you after all?"

"How do I know what it can do to me," I said. "What's in it?"

"Just film," said the director. "And wheels and little doo-dads. Look at the camera. But don't think about it. Be comfortable."

"How do you do that?" I asked.

"It's just mind over matter," he said. "You'll get used to it."

A man began sighting through the camera and several people adjusted lights. A strip of paper began to run over the top of the camera — the Teleprompter. (You read this aloud and it doesn't show on camera that you're reading. Makes you look like a brain.)

I read aloud: "Good evening, ladies and gentlemen, welcome to the—."

"Hold it," shouted the director. The teleprompter rolled back its message. The cameraman sat down and lit a cigarette. It was "unbelievably dull."

Woman, 29, complains of chronic fatigue

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

To Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am one of those perpetually tired people. I am a woman, 29, weighing 130 pounds at five feet, six inches. My fatigue has been a part of my life whether I'm overworked, underworked, bored or excited. It seems unrelated to the amount of sleep, which averages seven to eight hours a day.

My thyroid is normal and a glucose test showed I don't digest large amounts of sugar taken in one sitting. I don't have hypoglycemia. My blood count is minimal, but I'm not anemic.

I am ready to get illegal amphetamines because I can't stand being wiped out all the time. Isn't there anything else I can do? — Ms. T.M.

Well, you can't blame your age, weight, or lack of sleep for your plight. You use a lot of phrases that are confusing to me, and I assume to you as well — blood count being "minimal" but "not anemic," and others. I certainly couldn't interpret your glucose tolerance test from your description of the results. You could have a mild case of low blood sugar, or, for that matter, have a mild diabetes. I doubt that you have an under-functioning adrenal gland, although that should be checked, as should your thyroid.

I think it's time to toss aside your medical dictionary and look to some basic causes of fatigue. How about a chronic infection? Any afternoon temperature? Your "minimal" blood count could fit in with this. What about chest X-rays?

If your fatigue is not due to a physical cause, then you must look to psychological ones. You don't mention whehter or not you are married and, if you are, how many children you have. Is your domestic life too monotonous? Are you generally bored or depressed? Is your housework well-planned, or is it a day-to-day, dawn-to-dusk grind? Do you get out socially or take vacations? How about recreation? Nothing like a change of scenery to remove monotony and boredom. Consider some volunteer work.

I don't know where you plan on getting your illegal drugs, but no matter what the source I don't think that's going to be your ultimate answer. If no physical cause can be found for your "wiped out" condition you probably need psychological counseling.

☆ ☆ ☆

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 12 years old and suddenly my knees have started snapping and popping every time I move. Please explain what causes this? — "Snap, Crackle, Pop!"

Probably due to a tendon riding over a bone in your knee. At your age your bones may be temporarily outgrowing your tendons and the cartilage serving them. You can expect the "snaps, crackles, and pops" to continue until the structures adjust. Annoying, but not serious.

Health Tip

Watching calories is important no matter how old you are, but as a person ages this task is more significant, according to the Nebraska Medical Association.

Because most persons are not as active in later adulthood, and because certain physical requirements lessen during these years, older persons do not need to consume the same level of calories as they did when they were younger. Therefore, it is important for older persons to try to cut down on those highly caloric foods which fail to provide needed protein, vitamins, minerals and other important nutrients.

However, it is also important to note that older persons require the same basic nutritional elements as do those of other age groups.

These requirements may be satisfied by a daily diet consisting of certain amounts of the four basic food groups: the milk group; the meat group, which includes protein food such as fish, poultry, eggs and cheese, with dried peas and peanut butter as occasional substitutes; the vegetable and fruit group; and the cereal group, including whole grain and enriched bread, cereal, and potatoes.

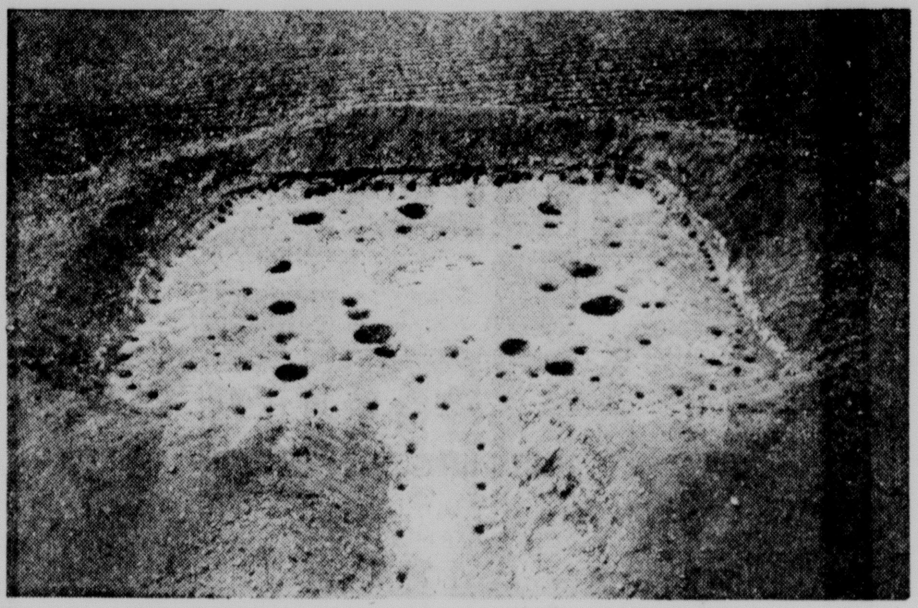
Model shows structure of square earth lodge, home of prehistoric settlers on the Great Plains.

Clues to prehistoric residents of the Lancaster County area emerge in artifacts discovered by archeologists. That process, in one example, is detailed in these stories by Bob Reeves.



Floor of one house excavated with post holes shown.

Artifacts only remnants of prehistoric local life

Given the extremes of Nebraska's climate, these early houses were quite durable. They could stand for 20 to 30 years if kept in repair, Jensen said.

The inside of a lodge was probably dark and gloomy, because there were no windows, but it was warm in winter and cool in summer.

The entrance was a hallway ten to 15 feet long, with a doorway probably covered with skins. In the center was a firepit, with a smokehole in the center of the roof.

No one knows for sure where these early people came from. Archeologists suspect they were descendants of Indians living southeast of here in the lower Missouri and Mississippi valleys.

They hunted deer and small game along the creek, gathered seeds, nuts and berries in season and planted gardens, primarily squash, corn, beans and sunflowers.

Though the Roca site was a permanent village, these people were semi-nomadic. After planting their crops in the spring the whole village — men, women and children — packed up and went off on an exteneed buffalo hunt, following the bison herds across theprairie.

Presumably they carried tents, possibly a form of teepee, for temporary shelter on the hunt.

They had no horses; their only domesticated animal was the dog. But dogs served as beasts of burden, carrying packs and dragging tent poles on their long hunting trek.

In late summer they returned to harvest their produce, which was stored in deep pits in the lodge floors.

Then they usually left for another hunting trip in the fall. Presumably they dried some buffalo meat for winter.

They also probably fished in Salt Creek and caught mussels, a common shellfish at that time.

A mystery to anthropologists is what became of these people after 1400. None of the square lodge sites in Nebraska dates from later than 1450 — well before whit men arrived.

Jensen believes a mammoth drouth — "which made the 1930's look like a pinic" — drove them northward into the Dakotas. Square lodges have been found there dating from a later time.

Another theory is that wild bands of nomads — possibly early Apaches — came through Nebraska driving the more sedentary peoples away.

Jensen says that only about 10% of the Indian sites in Nebraska have been excavated. Given more time and more anthropologists, a more complete picture of these early Nebraskans may someday be drawn.

What kind of people lived in Lancaster County more than 600 years ago?

State archeologists admit that what they know about prehistoric Indians is sketchy at best.

Everything known is based on what artifacts are not subject to decay. Stone implements, arrowheads and knife blades and pieces of broken pots make up most of the evidence.

The charred remains of houses and other combustibles help them piece together the story.

Most prehistoric houses on the Great Plains were destroyed by prairie fires, according to State Hsitorical Society Director Marvin Kivett.

At the John A. Schrader farm site, near Roca, there was once a village of square earth lodges.

Three have been excavated, but there were probably five or six of the mound-like structures there, said curator of preservation Dick Jensen.

An early example of communal living, each lodge was large enough to shelter 20 to 30 people. The entire village may have had more than 100 inhabitants.

Of the lodges excavated, one measures 40 feet square and the other two about 25 feet.

In each case, a shallow square pit was leveled and enclosed with a picket of small posts. Four large tree trunks were placed upright near the center.

On these supports rafters were hung. The roof was a layer of twigs, then a layer of grass, then a layer of sod, grass-side outward.

Archeologists have learned about the construction methods by studying the remains of hundreds of similar square earth lodges throughout the Plains area.

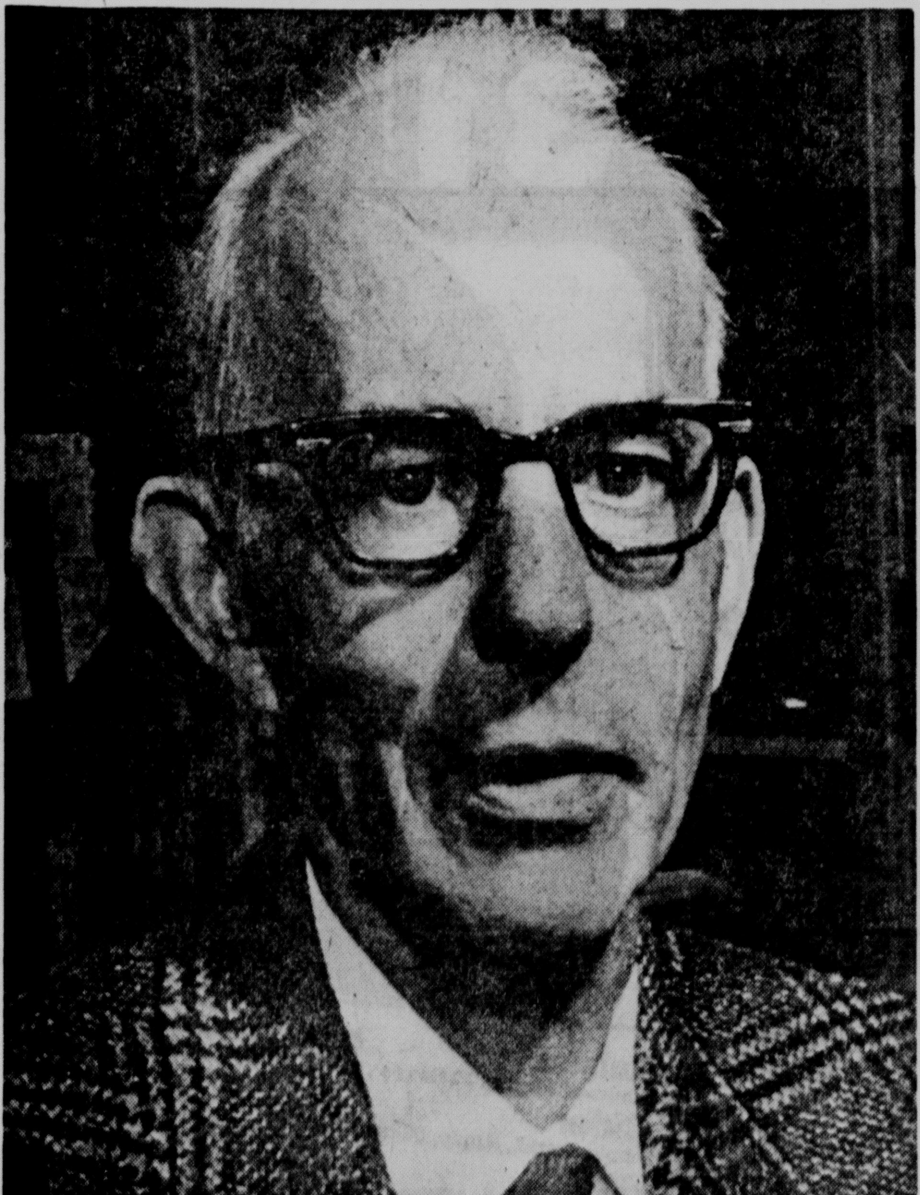
Sand tempered pot, 13½ inches high, was restored from dig.



Marvin Kivett now heads operations at Nebraska State Historical Society.

He 'dug' archeology as youth

Marvin Kivett first became interested in archeology when his uncle gave him an arrowhead.

At that time he was a Weeping Water schoolboy. Now director of the Nebraska State Historical Society, he has a list of thousands of specimens to his credit.

"I've still got that arrowhead," he said. "It's one of the few specimens I've never turned in."

Young Marv, who was called Gus back then, started going out on digs with Dr. L. M. Kunkel, a Weeping Water physician.

Kunkel was a real archeology buff. "He used to let people work out their doctor bills by excavating an Indian site," Kivett recalls.

After a while Gus had quite a collection of artifacts — bits of pottery, stone utensils — from Nebraska's prehistoric inhabitants. He took some to the State Historical Society to be examined.

At that time A. T. Hill, a pioneer in Great Plains archeology, had become museum director. Hill, a former automobile salesman in Hastings, had turned his hobby of studying Indians into an expertise that was unparalleled at the time.

Kivett said he was surprised when Hill "showed little interest in the beautiful stonework but wanted to see the small pottery shards."

Hill had discovered that the style of pottery is the key to classifying earl Indian cultures, but at that time few scholars agreed with him.

After dropping out of high school to join a CCC camp during the heart of the depression, Kivett asked Hill for a job. Hill told him he could join one of the society's digs but would have to work without pay.

In May 1935, the 18-year old Kivett came to Lancaster County to work on the crew excavating a site on what was then John A. Schrader's farm nine miles south of Lincoln.

Kivett's notes of that first professional dig are filled with enthusiasm about everything — even the weather. "I think I was trying to please the bosses," Kivett recalls.

But young Gus wasn't as naive as some of the rookies on the crew — he had been digging for years.

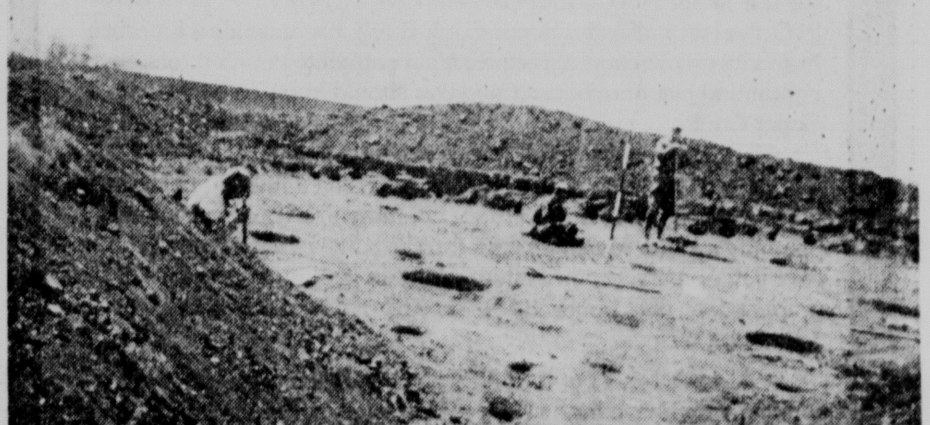
"Primarily I got to move dirt," he said, although his notes indicate that he did find several artifacts.

The process of digging sounds rather tedious to the uninitiated.

Once the site was located, thin layers of soil were scraped off the flat shovels and trowels, care being taken not to go too deep with each stroke.

Today archeologists sometimes use bulldozers for excavating the initial layers, but in those days it was all muscle power, Kivett said.

"Archeologists don't really do it all with toothpicks and whiskbrooms," he acknowledges.



1935 crew at work. Kivett is in center, in rare pose: "Hill didn't like us to sit."

Every bit of dirt that shows signs of previous disturbance was removed, leaving bare the undisturbed floor of an ancient house.

At the Schrader site, three houses were excavated.

The crew turned up a wide variety of specimens, including some unusual pottery which showed elements of two early Nebraska cultures, both of which have been dated between 1000 and 1400 A.D.

The Schrader site in 1972 became the only Indian site in Lancaster County to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places because of this unique blending of the Nebraska culture, generally found in eastern Nebraska, and the Upper Republican culture, usually found further west.

After the dig, each house was carefully covered up again and Schrader planted crops on top of it.

Most Indian diggings are unmarked, Kivett said, to prevent people from coming in and messing them up.

People who don't know what they're doing can destroy a site, he said. So even though it's on the Historical Register, most of us will never know exactly where the Schrader site is located.

After this first experience with the society, the self-trained Hill told Kivett in no uncertain terms that if he wanted to be an archeologist, he must first get an education.

"So it was back to Weeping Water High for me," Kivett said.

Kivett obtained his masters in anthropology in 1952, three years after succeeding Hill as museum director.

Panama Canal saga basic reading for present times

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

Book Review

Most histories aren't exactly timely, but here's one that is: a history of the building of the Panama Canal which ought to be required reading for anyone wanting to form an educated opinion about the new canal treaties.

Massachusetts historian David McCullough, who dotes on turn-of-the century America, began researching "The Path Between the Seas" more than ten years ago, long before the canal "leaped into the headlines," as he puts it.

This richly-detailed work (617 pages) tells of every phase of planning and construction of the canal, from its inception in 1870 to completion in 1914, on the eve of World War I.

Getting through the book is no labor. It reads like a novel. The drana evolves from the viewpoint of the actors, who become as lifelike as anybody created by Michener or Costain.

McCullough refuses to approach his subject in retrospect, but follows the events step-by-step as they were perceived at the time.

A gripping sense of suspense is imposed on the whole saga. The reader finds himself almost believing that the early French attempt to build a sea-level canal might succeed, or that American popular opinion might later defeat the canal at Panama.

Thruogh it all, McCullough inparts the thrill of adventure: the grand conquest of nature in one of the biggest engineering feats in history.

Many little-known or forgotten facts about the canal are brought to light. For example:

—If only eight U.S. Senators had switched their votes on June 19, 1902, the canal would have been built in Nicaragua, not Panama.

—The U.S. bought the canal property for $40 million from the French. If the price had been a bit higher, the deal would probably have fallen through.

—Phillipe Bunau-Varilla, a former director of the French canal effort, engineered the 1903 Panamanian "revolution" and wrote the original treaty between the U.S. and the new government.

—Bunau-Varilla's treaty gave the U.S. greater power in the canal zone than even the U.S. government had been seeking.

—The treaty was not acceptable to the new Panamanian government, but Panama ratified it out of fear that the U.S. would negotiate with Colombia.

—The canal was built almost entirely by black labor, mostly imported from the Caribbean. Of the more than 6,000 workers who died during the U.S. operation, the vast majority were black.

When the U.S. took over the construction in 1903, there was widespread skepticism among Americans. Panama seemed obviously the wrong place for a canal, because of the French failure. Nicaragua, with its beautiful natural lake as a bridge for a lock canal, seemed a far superior site.

Ironically, the eventual canal at Panama was based on an "artificial Nicaragua" — a lock system and a man-made lake.

The American press reacted against the way the U.S. virtually "stole" Panama from Colombia. President Theodore Roosevelt dared to do the unpopular thing, by pushing for the Panama location.

Popular opinion does not always stand the test of time, as should be remembered in the current Senate debate. Roosevelt, as McCullough pictures him, cared more about America's ultimate destiny as a world leader than he did about political expediency.

"I took the Isthmus," he told audiences with pride. Roosevelt was decisive, grandiose in his schemes, seldom merely prudent. He saw the canal as the crowning glory of his presidency.

The U.S. triumph at Panama was as much a conquest of yellow fever and malaria as of technical obstacles. As the French struggled in the jungle with antiquated equipment, their workers had died of tropical diseases.

For years, even the best-educated thought the diseases were caused by "evil living and debauchery." After the Americans took over, it was three years before the patient, untiring Dr. William Gorgas could convince the directors that eradicating mosquitos would lower the death toll.

As the canal work proceeded, the Americans created almost antiseptic conditions in the Zone, and raised the Panamanians' living standard dramatically by giving them sewers, plumbing and paved streets.

The real hero of the book, however, is the canal itself. Once the work was far enough along, there was no stopping it — too much had been invested. The canal bred a series of technological innovations, of a magnitude analogous to the space program today.

A vast railroad network was constructed on the 50-mile canal route, including 79 miles of track alone in the nine-mile Culebra Cut through the Continental Divide.

Mammoth steam shovels and dredges removed enough earth from Panama to equal a canal ten feet deep by 55 feet wide from San Francisco to New York.

The locks — the largest concrete structures in the world — were actually well-tuned electric-powered machines, built under the first government contract with an aspiring young company, General Electric.

In the 1970's, the locks have become too small for many of the biggest ships. The treaties re-open the question of a sea-level canal.

But with our modern, two-ocean navy, the strategic importance of the canal may have changed. It is certainly not evident that enemy control of Panama would threaten U.S. security now as it would have in Roosevelt's day.

McCullough's book won't tell you whether or not the present treaties, spelling a phased turnover of the canal to Panama, are good or bad for the United States. But it will help to free the issue from much of the jingoistic emotionalism that has sprung up around what some politicians are calling America's most prized possession.

Jobless, not worthless

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a strong feeling that by the time you (or a member of your staff) reads this, I may not be around, but I hope you print this with a response that will help others who share my dilemma.

I spent eight years earning three university degrees, and now I can't find a job. I was even willing to work out of my field and do typing or waitress work, but was turned down with, "You'd only leave us as soon as we got you trained."

Now I have nothing and I can't afford to continue looking for work. The cost of resumes, gasoline, parking and just living while job hunting has taken all my money. After I mail this letter, I won't even have the price of another postage stamp!

Someday, if a multi-degreed person should ask you for job, I hope you'll remember me, and how happy I would have been to be your typist.

WORTHLESS

DEAR WORTHLESS: Your signature is a revealing clue to your problem. No one, whether he has three degrees, or none, whether he's employed or jobless, is "worthless."

If you're still around, and I sincerely hope you are, I beg you to call the Suicide Prevention hotline. If there's none in your city, contact your local Mental Health Association. You desperately need more help than I can give you in a letter. God bless. And let me hear from you again. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I am money-minded when I probably should have only "love" on my mind, but I have a question to ask. I am engaged to be married soon, and my fiance and I have never talked about money. I know he has a good job, but I don't know how much he makes. I don't even know if he carries any insurance other than what he has on his car.

I work and intend to continue for a while after I'm married, but I don't know if I should plan on supporting myself or not. Should we have a joint checking and savings account? Would it be wrong of me to bring up these things before we are married?

SOON-TO-BE-BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: It would be wrong NOT to! Every couple should set up a budget together before marriage and decide how much to allow for rent, entertainment, insurance, clothing, etc. And be sure you allow for possible illnesses and accidents. (All kinds!)

DEAR ABBY: I consider myself an average, normal male. I'm married and have three children. I recall reading some letters in your column recently questioning the masculinity of men who wear one gold earring in their left ear.

I have worn a gold earring in my left ear for nearly two years — ever since my wife found it in the back seat of our car.

Opening lead - ten of spades.

The Ethics Committee at Alcatraz was in solemn session. The complainant was East, who testified that his cellmate, South, had that day perpetrated a foul and unconscionable act of trickery, enabling him to make four hearts — which might otherwise have gone down.

East stated that he had won the spade lead with the jack and continued with the ace, South and West both following suit. But when he led the king of spades, said East, declarer deliberately revoked, ruffing with the ten as West discarded a club.

At this point, according to East, South corrected the revoke — which was not yet established and therefore entailed no penalty — by putting the heart ten back in his hand and following suit with a spade.

East led another spade, but he was fighting a losing battle. South ruffed with the ten, played a diamond to the ace, returned a trump and finessed the nine — since he knew that East had the jack of hearts because of West's inability to overruff the ten at trick three.

East pointed out that if West had been able to overruff at trick three, South could then correct the revoke, trump the next spade with the queen, and make the contract if West held either the singleton or doubleton jack of trumps.

South, a famous criminal lawyer who was serving three years for sharp practice, testified that his six of spades had somehow gotten stuck behind the seven of clubs and that he did not see it until after West had discarded a club.

The Ethics Committee, after due deliberation, decided that South's "inadvertent" revoke at trick three was simply another version of the notorious Alcatraz Coup. Accordingly, they suspended him from further bridge activities for the balance of his term.

Integration witness now sends daughter to private school

San Francisco (AP) — Melba Beals, who cringed at taunts and jeers as one of nine black children who integrated a Little Rock, Ark., high school 20 years ago, sends her own daughter to a private school so she can look back on "a very pretty education."

"I don't want her to go through what I went through. I want her to be able to look at her high school album and really smile," said Ms. Beals who, on Sept. 24, 1957, walked into Little Rock's Central High School — and into history.

She was 15 years old and entering the 11th grade. Now a news reporter for KRON-TV here, she says she wants her 14-year-old daughter, Kellie, to have "what I didn't have, which is a very pretty education."

Concerned about the quality of public education, she has sent Kellie to private schools for the past six years.

"A few years ago she did go to a Lutheran school where there were some extreme racial problems. I didn't like what it was doing to her. I saw it getting to the core of her existence, like Central could have done to me.

"She stayed for a year. I wanted her to be realistic. I wanted her to know what this country is about."

Ms. Beals, who prefers that designation, recalls with difficulty her own first steps into the center of Southern racial strife.

"At first it was an adventure. I didn't have noble thoughts. I wondered what was in this huge castle. Why didn't they want me to go in there?"

The first day, on he way up to her homeroom on the third floor, she was spat on and kicked. The mother of one of the white children slapped her.

School ended early that day for the black children, she remembered.

Despite a personal bodyguard, the assault continued.

"They shot acid at us in squirt guns, turned scalding water on us in the gymnasium showers, stole our books, dumped eggs on our heads and did other things I wouldn't have dreamed of."

Sprightly walk a daily ritual

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Crete — Most 95-year-olds, if they walk at all, need a cane just to tap-tap-tap. When Ed Dolansky and his stylish companion swing out together, it's tippity-tappity-swish-go-zing-zing.

Paired on the Crete scene for decades, the spirited twosome are standouts all the more now that Ed is sprinting toward the century mark. His daily walks downtown, close to a mile in each direction, could be called a ritual if they weren't so confounded much pleasure.

His back as straight as the cane, the dapper oldster still projects the image of the clothing salesman he was for years. Colorful sport shirts, often with smartly contrasting ties, are fitting complements to his springy step.

"I've got good arms, good legs and a pretty good body, but there's nothing to be done about this old face," said the Crete native. "I thank the good Lord for the health He's given me, but it isn't hard if a person just lives a clean natural life."

To the affable Ed, clean means two or three cigars a day and "a beer maybe once or twice a month as long as somebody else is buying." The natural is few sweets, many fruits and "lots of good vegetable soup instead of all that greasy stuff."

One hamburger a week is his fried meat quota and he thinks vitamins are unnecessary. A copper ring on one finger of each hand protects well from "that damned arthritis."

"Never over-exert or over-indulge in anything," warned Dolansky, his mind obviously as nimble as his body. "Everyone should work like I do when I mow my big yard. If you feel fatigue in the muscles, quit. There's another day coming."

Besides his "most enjoyable" sales career of about 15 years, the widower also worked as a farmhand and telephone lineman before closing out his work record in 1956 as a school custodian. He has lived alone most of the time since the death of his wife, Grace, in 1945.

A Crete daughter, Mrs. Glenn Kemper, is especially handy for automobile trips, since Ed never owned a car. A retired son in California, Harry, still elicits reflections on his athletic exploits as a Crete high schooler.

Typical of the oldster's wit is a story told by his daughter on one of the nonagenarian's rare visits to a doctor. Amazed at the patient's soundness, the medic asked if it were really true he was in his 90's.

"Sh-h-h," admonished Ed. "Don't let these girls hear you saying that."

Believed to be Crete's oldest man and only a shade younger than the oldest woman, Dolansky has "no particular goal" of making it to 100. If the many warnings are valid about physical strain after 40, he'd might as well give up.

"About the only days I don't walk downtown are when there is too much snow," he quipped. "Those days I get my exercise by staying home and scooping."

State pesticide check refused

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

Three of Nebraska's state senators flatly refused to have any part of legislation that would allow a state pesticide inspector to enter a farmstead without a warrant during a hearing Tuesday on the intention of the Environmental Protection Agency to disapprove of the state pesticide plan.

Sens. Loran Schmit of Bellwood, Bill Burrows of Adams and John DeCamp of Neligh, all members of the Agricultural and Environment Committee of the Legislature, said they were willing to compromise with most of the 25 objections EPA has to the state pesticide plan, but they wanted no part of proposed state enforcement.

DeCamp charged that asking the state to enforce a federal law was unconstitutional. "This has been demonstrated in court cases between OSHA (Occupational Safety and Health Administration) and state governments," DeCamp said.

One major objection to enforcement requirements cited by the senators involved the right of an inspector to enter a farmstead or field and take samples of chemicals being used. This may have been the result of a misunderstanding between EPA and state officials.

"We never intended that entry to a farm should be without a warrant or consent of the farmer," said John Wicklund, chief of the pesticide division of EPA Region 7.

Whether this information will soften the state position on enforcement procedures remains to be seen, but two other EPA objections to the state law were removed by Schmit. He reported his committee will sponsor legislation to eliminate a self-certification provision from the state law and to establish a penalty for use of restricted pesticides without first being certified.

Under the self-certification programs, a farmer could read and sign a statement that he safely understood the use of a particular pesticide to become qualified to use it. The penalty provision Schmit offered would establish a fine of $10 to $50 for use of a restricted pesticide without being certified. To become certified, a farmer must attend a training session on safe use of pesticides being offered by the Extension Service.

Environmentalists and organic farmers took advantage of the hearing to make presentations that were generally against the use of any pesticides. Len Schropfer of Milligan assembled a panel presentation for the hearing.

Schropfer suggested the issue of state versus federal control of the program was largely a political one that involved individuals who are running for the U.S. Senate and for governor.

Sen. Burrows denied politics played a role, however. "Sen. Schmit and I belong to opposite political parties, but that isn't a factor. The factor involved is whether the State Legislature is merely a rubber-stamp body for the federal government or does it write laws for the people of Nebraska," he said. "If we are only a rubber stamp we might as well stay home."

Schropfer also charged that environmentalists aren't heard because farm papers and magazines are filled with advertisements from chemical companies and farm equipment companies.

Schropfer called for tougher controls on pesticides of all kinds because of damage to walnut trees, wild grapes and other trees by careless spraying. He also said pumpkin, melon and squash on his own farm had been damaged for each of the last three years by sprays from other farms.

"This isn't just a garden crop to us. We use pumpkins to feed our chickens, to produce a special egg with a yellow yolk. They are the best eggs you can buy in Fillmore County," he said.

John Papst of Estes Park, Colo., introduced into evidence an article from the Washington Post indicating the Food and Drug Administration had found evidence of possible fraud in testing of pesticides for safety.

Papst called for tighter regulations and supervision of pesticide testing.

Kim Rempt of Lincoln cited studies of organic farming compared to chemical farming that indicated chemicals were not really needed. "The organic farms did have lower yields but they also had lower expenses. At the end of the year they had better profits than the chemical farmers," he said.

Steve Porter of Cortland acknowledged that farmers depended on chemical controls but said that government ought to be helping farmers work back toward natural methods of farming.

Schropfer closed his presentation saying that the present worldwide crop surplus gave government a fine opportunity to reduce crop production by a return to organic methods of farming. "The set aside program to reduce production won't work because farmers will pour chemicals and artificial fertilizers on the remaining acres killing every weed and bug. They will poison the environment." he said.

Bob Warrick, president of the Sierra Club, sent a telegram urging that EPA "Hang tough on its insistence for a tough program."

Fossils found during summer trip

Despite the lack of a Mt. Vesuvius in Nebraska, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln geologist spent part of last summer digging for fossil bones in a pile of volcanic ash in the northeastern part of the state.

A temporary exhibit of findings from the diggings will be installed in the Morrill Hall museum on the UNL campus this winter, said Dr. Michael Voorhies, professor of geology and curator of vertebrate paleontology at UNL.

Thus far, 13 complete rhinoceros skeletons; skeletons of three-toed horses, a turtle and parts of a large bear-like creature have been uncovered at the site.

Voorhies said there may be as many as 200 more skeletons at the site, possibly including those of such rare animals as the saber-toothed cat and the ancestor of the modern horse. Field work will continue next summer.

Voorhies said the site covers several thousand square feet in area. The different kinds of animal skeletons found there indicate that it probably was a waterhole that was buried by about eight feet of volcanic ash.

And unlike the fossils found at Agate Springs, a similar but older site in northwestern Nebraska, most of the skeletons are complete.

"To the best of anyone's knowledge, there never has been volcanic activity in Nebraska," Voorhies said. "But there are several beds of pure volcanic ash, sometimes 20 or 30 feet thick, in the state."

Voorhies said it is most likely that prevailing westerly winds carried the ash into the state about 10 million years ago. Probable areas of the volcanic eruptions were the Rocky Mountain region or the Great Basin farther west.

Detailed study of the chemical makeup of the ash may reveal its source.

"The fact that these skeletons are intact indicates that they were buried rapidly, possibly causing the animals to die of suffocation as they were covered with ash," Voorhies said.

Omaha Amtrak changes may be 2 months away

Omaha (AP) — It may be as long as two months before Amtrak starts its $1.1 million in improvements in Omaha, it was learned Tuesday.

S.P. Benson, mayoral assistant, and other officials met with Amtrak representatives to discuss plans, including improvements at the city-owned Union Station.

Amtrak also plans to lay new track so trains using the station can avoid backing-in and backing-out movements.

Amtrak has operated out of a converted mobile home for four years, but decided two weeks ago to move to the Union Station. The station also is used by the Western Heritage Society, which operates a museum.

Jug of wine waits for last survivor

Howells (AP) — In the end, there will be one man left to drink a bottle of wine bought in 1935 for the "last man."

When the Howells Last Man Club held its 42nd reunion last Saturday, eight of the 13 surviving members were able to attend.

On the banquet table in the American Legion hall sat the bottle of California wine bought for the first reunion of Howells-area World War I Army veterans. The bottle is kept in a bank vault between reunions, waiting for the day when only one club member remains.

During the traditional alphabetical roll call, six names were called and listed as "deceased" before Norman Folda, 77, Omaha, the youngest surviving member, answered "present."

John Wiemann of Howells is the oldest survivor at 87. The five other surviving members were listed as "absent and accounted for."

Forty miniature chairs contain the names of the original members. When a member dies, his chair is symbolically leaned forward against a replica of the table used for the first meeting in 1935.

During the early club years, the annual gathering drew a large banquet crowd complete with a guest speaker and entertainment.

Reunion day in 1941 was especially memorable, Folda said. The reunion was held in December that year and the Japanese had just attacked Pearl Harbor.

"When we heard it on the radio we thought it was just another one of Orson Welles' radio programs, he said. "But it was the real thing."

The idea of starting a last man club came from a newspaper photograph of a Civil War veteran drinking a toast to members of the Grand Army of the Republic, said Dr. J.F. Palensky, Bloomfield. He said two Howells men, George Fiala and O. L. Krual, now deceased, organized the club for area men who served in World War I.

Antiques missing

Omaha (AP) — Four antique lanterns apparently have been stolen from the WOW building and Omaha City Councilman Leo Kraft said Tuesday he is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to their recovery.

Draft said the glass lanterns, valued at $1,000 each, are missing from a building which is being torn down.

Navy Band due Oct. 9

Crete (UPI) — The United States Navy Band is scheduled to make an appearance Oct. 9 on the Doane College campus.

Doane officials also announced Tuesday the Nebraska Committee for the Humanities has granted the college $5,164 to help fund "Prairie Project '78," a two-day event to be held March, 1978, at Doane and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campuses.

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln, chairman of the Legislature's Judiciary Committee, Tuesday announced a public hearing will be held Thursday in the Scottsbluff City Council chambers.

The committee will take testimony on the criminal code at 10 a.m. and on spouse abuse at 2 p.m.

Cancer grant made

Omaha (AP) — The Eppley Cancer Institute at the University of Nebraska Medical Center has been awarded a $507,000 grant to study pancreatic cancer. The three-year grant is from the National Cancer Institute's Pancreatic Cancer Task Force.

The research will be headed by Dr. Parvis Pour, who developed a method of producing pancreatic cancer in hamsters that closely resembles human tumors.

Enrollment up 23%

Omaha (UPI) — Metropolitan Technical Community College said pre-reigstration figures for its fall enrollment showed a nearly 600 student increase from last year's fall session, or a 23% increase.

The college said 3,209 students pre-registered for classes this year compared with 2,619 last year.

Pollution workshops set

Omaha (AP) — The Nebraska Natural Resources Commission will hold free public workshops on water pollution in five Nebraska cities in November.

The workshops, which will include discussions on agricultural runoff and erosion, will be held Nov. 10 in Norfolk; Nov. 16 in Alliance; Nov. 17 in North Platte; Nov. 18 in Kearney and Nov. 21 in Lincoln.

Intervention by senator into school suit denied

Omaha (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge Albert Schatz refused Tuesday to permit former State Sen. David Stahmer and his wife, Barbara, to intervene in the Omaha School District's desegregation suit.

Stahmer had sought to intervene in an effort to force students living in the Omaha city limits but attending schools in three suburban school districts to be included in the court-ordered Omaha busing program.

He sought to have some students in the District 66, Ralston and Millard school districts included in the busing program.

Schatz said that he could not permit Stahmer to intervene because the case is being decided now by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The judge said the District Court is without power to permit the intervention.

Economist: Ag profit estimate excessive

Associated Press

A University of Nebraska economist says farm profit estimates by federal officials proposing an irrigation project on Nebraska's Niobrara River "would make a lot of Nebraska farmers chuckle."

Dr. Bruce Johnson made the comment in a news release distributed by the Save the Niobrara River Association.

Johnson is connected with the university's Department of Agricultural Economics.

He said the $40,000 net income projected in a Bureau of Reclamation up-date on the controversial Norden Dam irrigation proposal for a typical 1,040-acre farm with 200 acres under center pivot irrigation "is about double what's close to realistic today."

Johnson also took issues with other figures in the March 1977 update of the farm budget analysis for the project.

For example, he said, the bureau's annual production average of 191 bushels of irrigated corn per acre projected in the analysis compares with current estimates by the NU Agricultural Economics Department of 125 bushels for the project area.

He said yields of 191 bushels per acre in the area are tops, not average.

Farmers are urged to strike

Elwood (UPI) — More than 200 farmers and their wives were told Monday night the nation's farmers should strike unless the Carter administration gives them 100% of parity on wheat and corn.

George Boucher of Ravenna suggested that farmers should join his "volunteer grass roots" effort in Nebraska and should indicate their support by displaying a sign reading "Farmers strike for 100% of parity" on their tractors or other farm machinery.

If the Carter administration turns a deaf ear to the 100% proposal, Boucher said, farmers should quit growing crops, purchasing machinery, fertilizer and other farm items and refuse to pay local, state and federal taxes.

In addition, Boucher said, the volunteer organization will promote the use of surplus grain to make grain alcohol for the manufacture of gasohol and will urge the government stop all meat imports.

Boucher said the government should ensure grain for domestic use and a "normal grainery" or reserve for protection from a bad crop year. The grain reserve, he said, should be owned by those who produce the grain.

Political 'hats' change when committees meet

Associated Press

Shirley Meckel of Burwell serves in state government as a sort of political split personality.

Mrs. Meckel switched her party affiliation from Democrat to Repulican recently, then was appointed by Gov. J. James Exon as the first female member of the Game and Parks Commission.

She holds the seat as a Republican under a law that prohibits more than four members of any party on the seven-member commission.

Mrs. Meckel, wife of Dr. Ben Meckel, holds a Democratic seat on the Commission on the Status of Women.

She was appointed to that commission in December of 1975, which was after the Legislature passed a law restricting membership on the 30-member panel to half from any one party.

Dr. Meckel is a Democratic member of the State Highway Commission.

Mrs. Meckel said the June switch to the GOP was due to her intention to work for Rep. Charles Thome if Thone seeks election to a statewide office in 1978.

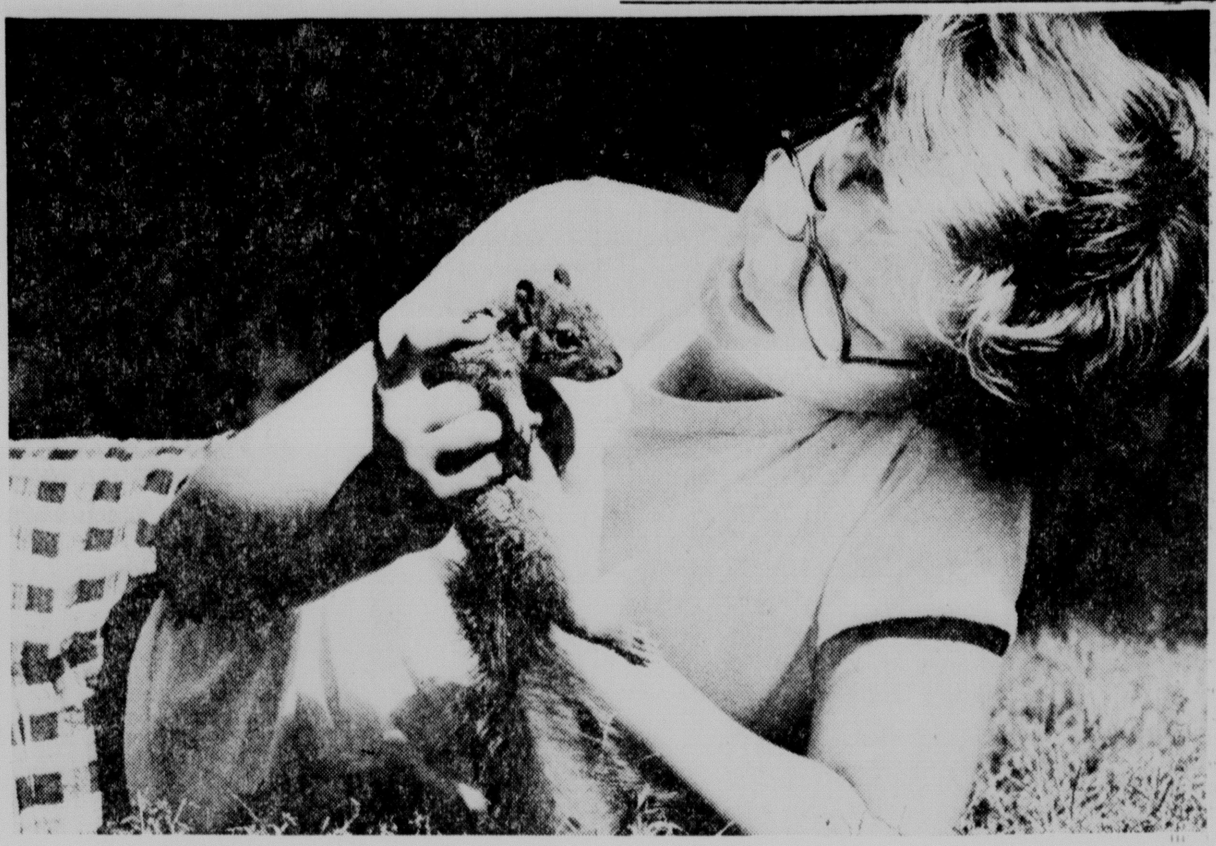
Many observers believe Thone will run for governor.

Mrs. Meckel said if Thone should run for the U.S. Senate against Exon, she would not support the Republican congressman.

Exon is expected to seek the U.S. Senate seat now held by retiring Sen. Carl Curtis.

Exon said he doesn't handle all the technical details on appointments such as the Game and Parks Commission designation.

"I knew we had to have a Republican and I thought Shirley was always a Republican," Exon said.



Squirrel friend found by youth

Ten-year-old Jim Foote of 3256 Holdrege holds a friendly wild squirrel he found while walking through the University of Nebraska-Lincoln East Campus near his home. He said he took the squirrel home and fed it nuts for dinner and then let it go. However, the handling of wild squirrels is not advised because they can bite and are often rabid.

Dominicans aided by med students

Omaha (AP) — The Rev. Ernesto Travieso says the hepatitis he contracted failed to keep his trip to the Dominican Republic from being "a beautiful, beautiful experience."

The 26 dentists, nurses, pharmacists and senior medical students from Creighton University who joined Father Travieso on the trip returned in good health after spending eight weeks treating patients in remote areas.

He said dental teams treated 4,500 patients and the medical teams ministered to more than 2,000 patients. They operated in San Jose, a city of 12,000, and Restauracion, a town of 2,000, both trading centers surrounded by rural villages situated in roadless mountain country.

Father Travieso said the trip cost about $40,000, with $15,000 provided by the Jesuit community in Omaha. He said a Milwaukee foundation that prefers anonymity donated $13,000 and the students conducted their own fund drive, in addition to paying $200 each to cover expenses on the trip.

He said pharmaceutical laboratories donated drugs and donations were received from Boys Town and the Old Immanuel Hospital.

Father Travieso, 38, said he plans to organize a similar trip next summer.

A native of Cuba, he said he has been spending summers in the Dominican Republic since he was a student at Regis College, Toronto, Ont.

Father Travieso has been a chaplain at Creighton three years.

Sponsorship of drum and bugle corps erroneously reported

The caption for the picture published in The Star on page one Tuesday contained erroneous information.

The photo showed a girl practicing a routine for the Ambassadors Drum and Bugle Corps, which was identified as being under the sponsorship of the American Legion.

The Legion dropped its sponsorship on Sept. 1, according to bugle corps secretary Mrs. William Rockel, and the group is now looking for new sponsors.

The corps has 55-60 members.

Teachers' contract ratified

Alliance (AP) — The Alliance Board of Education has ratified a new contract affecting about 110 teachers in the Alliance Education Association for the current school year.

The ratification, which came after both sides accepted recommendations made by a fact-finding committee, ends a five-month impasse between the board and the teachers. The teachers previously ratified the pact.

Under the new agreement, the Alliance teachers will receive a base salary of $8,650 this year, which is $25 more than the Board of Education offered last spring. Teachers also will receive a 4½-by-4½ salary step schedule, which awards extra pay in increments of 4½% of the base salary to teachers based on the number of years of service and amount of education past a bachelor's degree.

Alliance teachers had been working under last year's contract, which had a base of $8,400 and a 4-by-4 step schedule.

This was the second straight year in which the teachers and the board failed to reach agreement without the help of fact-finding arbitration.

Curtis says 'pressure' led to review of Short

United Press International

Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., said Tuesday a Justice Department decision to re-evaluate an alleged critical report regarding the nominee for U.S. Marshal in Nebraska was an indication the department was being "pressured" by top Nebraska Democrats.

Curtis reacted after Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., said the department had told him it would re-evaluate the FBI report on Clive Short, 65, of Omaha.

Curtis has threatened to block the nomination of Edward Warin of Omaha as U.S. attorney for Nebraska until the Democrats find a marshal candidate more acceptable than Short.

Zorinsky said Curtis was holding Warin's nomination "hostage" in an attempt to kill Short's chance for the marshal's post.

Warin's name has been sent to the Senate Judiciary Committee and Chairman James Eastland, D-Miss., has set the "blue slips" to Zorinsky and Curtis for their approval. Unless the "blue slips" are returned, it is customary for the committee not to act on a nomination.

Curtis said he has yet to place a hold on Warin's nomination but intended to do so.

"When the Short matter is cleared up and we find in truth and fact the efforts have been abandoned to name Short," Curtis said, "I will have no objection to the consideration of other nominations."

Curtis has charged Gov. J. James Exon with putting pressure on the Justice Department and the White House in behalf of Short. Exon has called Curtis' comments "unmitigated lies."

"I don't like to be called an unmitigated liar, or any other kind of liar, when I told the absolute truth as to what happened," Curtis said. "I don't like these intemperate letters from the governor and I don't like his other statements."

Exon has disclosed Short had an alcohol problem several years ago, but has not had a drink since 1961. Zorinsky said "lots of people have verified to me that the problem the governor spoke about was resolved many years ago."

Zorinsky said he has had many inquiries from aspirants for the marshal's job, but Short would remain the only nominee until the controversy was resolved.

Bourne (center) outlines project for Harley Schrader (right) of UNL physical plant and George Dworak, state energy director.

Campus solar project to heat shower water

A solar energy water heating project will begin at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in early October, according to one of its developers.

Richard Bourne, associate professor of construction management, said water needed for showers and laundry in Mabel Lee Hall, a physical education building, will be heated by two solar energy collectors.

In one, air that has been solar heated in large airtight enclosures will be forced across water coils through which storage water will be pumped, he said.

Freezeproof liquid will be forced through absorber plates to collect solar energy in the other. The liquid will transfer heat to the storage water by a closed loop heat exchanger in the tank.

Bourne said heat from solar energy will be transferred to water in a 37,000 gallon underground storage tank. He said the system will provide Mabel Lee Hall with 9,000 to 10,000 gallons of hot water per day. The water will be heated through a conversion unit in the storage tank.

Bourne said the $160,000 project could lead to systems that will be employed at large state-operated facilities and possibly scaled for home installation.

Lincoln, Omaha both grow

Washington (UPI) — A U.S. Census Bureau report shows the populations of Lincoln and Omaha increased from 1970 through 1975.

The Lincoln statistical area, which includes all of Lancaster county, moved from 173rd place in 1970 to 167th in 1975, among 259 areas surveyed nationally. Lincoln's population rose from 167,972 in 1970 to an estimated 185,400 in 1975.

The bureau said, however, the Omaha statistical population area, which includes Douglas and Sarpy counties in Nebraska and Pottawattamie County in Iowa, dropped from 69th to 70th among 259 areas surveyed nationally on the basis of size.

The Omaha metropolitan area population was placed at 572,800 in 1973 compared with 542,646 in 1970.

Regarding the Omaha statistics, the bureau said Douglas County contributed about two-thirds of the population growth while Sarpy County provided the balance of the gain.

Pottawattamie County's population reflected a slight decline.

Contracts set for airport building

Contracts for a nearly $900,000 equipment building were awarded Tuesday by the Lincoln Airport Authority board.

The building will be used to house crash, fire, rescue, security and snow removal equipment.

The three-pronged contract went to M.W. Anderson Construction of Lincoln for a total bid of $873,378 plus about $20,000 in options.

The mechanical contract went to E.O. Peters for a total of $341,558 and the electrical contract to OK Electric for a total $114,000.

A move to name the Lincoln Municipal Airport Lindbergh Field died a painless, quiet death when airport board members wouldn't make a motion to rename the airport.

In other business the board:

— Approved a contract to build 56 more stalls on the General Aviation parking lot.

— Approved an agreement with Westinghouse to pay $6,600 a year for repair insurance on the airport terminal's air conditioning.

Nebraska native Happy Newyear dead

Sleepy Eye, Minn. (AP) — Happy Newyear, a man who didn't celebrate his unusual name, died Monday. He was 95.

Born in Gresham, Neb., his real name was Emil Neujahr. In the German language, Neujahr means "new year." He changed the spelling of his last name to "Newyear."

"Happy" was a nickname given him by friends years ago. The name stuck. Eventually, he had his name listed in the Sleepy Eye telephone directory as Happy Newyear.

Because of his name, Newyear frequently was sought out for news interviews around the New Year's holiday. He didn't like publicity and generally refused to be interviewed.

Newyear came to Sleepy Eye 35 years ago. He worked as a canning plant worker and as a carpenter, mason and bricklayer.

Funeral services will be in Sleepy Eye Wednesday.

Materials from earth shape art

By Deb Gray
Star Staff Writer

The object is to make a sculpture — a labyrinth of designs — with a ton of colored sand, sifters, and about 30 art students.

Andrew Leicester, an environmental sculptor, was in Lincoln Tuesday to lecture to University of Nebraska-Lincoln students and to supervise the construction of his sculpture in the Nebraska Union, a five-hour undertaking.

His visit was sponsored by the Nebraska Union and the UNL art department.

Leicester said this was the second time he had made a sculpture from sand. The first was "Alluvial Fan," commissioned for a 1976 show sponsored by the Walker Art Center in Minneapolis.

For that show — all pieces were to depict the Mississippi River heritage — Leicester constructed a 22-foot wedge-shaped box — the shape of a river delta — filled with separate piles of colred sand. As water flowed over the sand, over time, it was redistributed into unpredictable patterns.

The concept was to capture the action and power of the river.

Leicester, born in 1948 in Birmingham, England, came to America seven years ago.

His sculptures are shaped from the materials of the earth. He says his work deals with the abstracts of "change, time, motion and physical decay."

"If the sculptures don't move, it is important the viewer move in relation to the sculpture," he said.

Leicester also received acclaim for his "Minnesota Highway Project," completed in 1974. In this landscape sculpture, located north of Rochester, Minn., he drew images on the hills with white limestone gravel laid in trenches along the contours of the earth.

He is now on a year's leave from the Minneapolis College of Arts and Design, where he is an assistant professor. He is traveling around the country to research a book on 20th century archeology.

His book, he said, will document those buildings built in this century, then deserted, but expected to stand for many years.

Twentieth century archeology is all around — like the buildings left from the remnants of the 1950s missile program, "where millions and millions were spent on granite structures that now stand empty."

Leicester is critical of much in American architecture. There's too much emphasis on the buildings and too little on the spaces around the buildings, he said.

He sees land around buildings cleared away into a "no-man's land to let these monolithic travesties rise from the ground."

Lincoln also has its share of "disgusting government buildings," he said, which "epitomize the medieval notion that buildings that house the government should look like castles or fortresses."

Leicester said Europeans are more conscious of landscaping their land. That's because of the adage, "the less you have, the more precious it becomes," he said.

Europeans own less land, per person, than Americans. They are also not as mobile — when they own a piece a land, they tend to stay there longer.

But, Leicester said, Americans do suffer from a lawn fetish."

"They mow it and water it and mow it and water it. But when they are finished, every one looks the same."

Arrest warrant is issued for Lincolnite, 19

A bench warrant has been issued for the arrest of a 19-year-old Lincoln man who failed to appear in Lancaster County Court Tuesday morning on charges of first-degree sexual assault and indecent exposure.

Thomas Tejral, of 6000 Thornton Drive, was to appear before Judge Robert Camp to have a preliminary hearing date set on the charges which stem from two separate incidents. Camp ordered a total of $5,000 bonds on Tejral forfeited and the arrest warrant issued.

Tejral allegedly assaulted a young Crete woman on Sept. 13. The indecent exposure charge stems from a July incident. Bond on the sexual assault charge had been set at $4,000, with $1,000 bond on the other charge. Court records show that Tejral posted 10% on both bonds and was released.

Two men sought in diamond theft

Lincoln police are looking for two men who allegedly stole a $750 diamond from a downtown jewelry store late Monday afternoon after causing a disturbance in the store.

An employe of Fred Wilson Jewelers, 1342 O St., told police the two men purchased a bracelet from the store then caused a minor disturbance. After the men left the clerk noticed the one-half carat, 52-point diamond missing.

Police described the suspects as two white males in their mid-30s.

Lincoln woman's hearing slated

A 19-year-old Lincoln woman who allegedly assaulted a University of Nebraska-Lincoln police officer during a Sept. 14 rock concert at the UNL sports complex will have a preliminary hearing on the matter Nov. 14 in Lancaster County Court.

Lynn Roschewski also faces charges of possession of marijuana and intoxication stemming from her arrest the night of the Fleetwood Mac concert.

Hearing on assault slated for Lincolnite

A 35-year-old Lincoln man who allegedly assaulted a police officer Sept. 13 will face a preliminary hearing on those charges Nov. 16 in Lancaster County Court.

Gilberto Alcocer of 2701 N. 27th was arrested after a disturbance at 435 S. 13th during which officer Tim Carmichael was reportedly assaulted.

Alcocer is free on $2,500 bond.

New selling halts rally

Dow Ind. —5.80

New York (AP) — Renewed selling in basic-industry issues halted a fledgling rally in the stock market Tuesday and pushed the Dow Jones industrial average to a new 21½-month low.

Analysts said the market continued to suffer from concern over rising interest rates and fears of an economic slowdown.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had risen 2.51 on the strength of a late upturn Monday, fell back 5.80 to 835.85 in Tuesday's trading.

That marked the lowest close for the average since it finished at 832.81 on Dec. 12, 1975.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 7-6 spread in the daily tally at the New York Stock Exchange, and the exchange's composite index slipped .08 to 52.12.

Buying interest from Monday's upswing extended only for about a half hour into Tuesday's session. The Dow, up about a point in early trading, began to sink again by midmorning.

The principal sources of weakness in the average were such basic-industry issues as U.S. Steel, down 1 at 27⅝ as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE; Allied Chemical, off 1⅜ at 43¾, and International Paper, ⅜ lower at 43⅜.

These and other "cyclical" issues have been under pressure for some time now amid expectations that basic-industry companies would suffer most in any economic slowdown.

Another drag on the Dow was General Electric, off 1⅜ at 51. The company disclosed management changes in its troubled nuclear-reactor business.

In addition to worries about the business outlook, analysts said selling was prompted by fears that the recent rise of interest rates would continue.

Money market-watchers said moves by the Federal Reserve on Monday suggested that the Fed was aiming to tighten credit further in its effort to control inflation by restraining the growth of the money supply.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials lost .18 to 104.79, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was off .14 at 95.24.

Mapco tumbled 3¾ to 37¼ in active trading. The diversified energy company said its third quarter earnings would be flat at best.

UV Industries led the active list, up 1⅝ at 22 in trading that included a 450,000-share block at 20. Late in the day UV said it had bought the block from an investment company.

UV Industries warrants, the volume leader among American Stock Exchange issues, rose ⅞ to 5.

The Amex market value index rose .35 to 117.48, and the NASDAQ composite index of over-the-counter stocks edged up .05 to 99.74.

Beatrice firefighters union files suit

Beatrice (AP) — The Beatrice Firefighters Union has filed suit in District Court for breach of contract regarding recent wage negotiations.

The firefighters complaint against the city involves "a past practice" of the city in giving wage increases, City Administrative Asst. Terry Doyle said Tuesday.

The practice in question is deducting accumulated cost of living raises from wage raises when the city and bargaining group agree to another increase.

The firefighters say they contracted for a 21-cent raise on their base salary, while the city gave them only a one-cent raise.

According to a July 28 agreement between the union and the city, the firefighters' salaries would be raised 21 cents per hour on the base salary.

Since August of 1976, however, the city already has given the firefighters two 10-cent per hour raises, according to an existing agreement between the two groups. That agreement provides the firefighters 10 cents per hour for every four points the consumer price index rises as a cost of living index.

The firefighters suit charges that refusal to pay the amended base salary together with the cost of living increases was a breach of contract.

Soybean, corn futures sink

Chicago (AP) — Soybean and corn futures prices sank firmly lower, with harvest pressure triggering most of the losses, Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Soybeans dropped about 10 cents a bushel, while corn deliveries were off nearly four cents. Wheat and oats lost about two cents each.

Clear weather in the Midwest enabled corn and soybean harvesting to continue after more than a week of rain delays.

Also depressing levels in the two pits were weaker cash bids and reports of good-sized farmer selling of the newly harvested crops.

GM recalls some '78 cars

Detroit (AP) — General Motors Corp. recalled some 32,000 late 1977 and early 1978 model cars to inspect rear axles which could break.

The rear axle shafts on some of the models recalled had a flaw in the metal "which could result in axle breakage," GM said.

GM said it had no reports of accidents resulting from broken axles.

Models recalled were in these lines: Chevrolet Nova, Pontiac Ventura, Pontiac Phoenix, Oldsmobile Omega and Buick Skylark.

Fewer hospital beds advocated

Washington (UPI) — The nation's hospitals should eliminate 100,000 unnecessary beds by 1984 and increase occupancy rates of those remaining, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said.

HEW proposed new national health planning guidelines to control the growth of health care facilities and equipment.

"The guidelines will help put the brakes on construction of new hospital bed space and high cost specialty services, such as open heart surgery and computerized X-ray scanning," HEW Secretary Joseph Califano said in a statement.

Hospital costs "now threaten to bankrupt our health care system," he said.

The guidelines are intended for use by the 205 local health systems agencies across the coutnry in planning the allocation of health resources.

The guidelines set as a goal a reduction by 1984 in the supply of non-federal hospital beds from 4.5 beds per thousand persons to 4 beds per thousand.

Dividend rises

Minneapolis (AP) — General Mills Inc. increased its quarterly dividend rate from 22¢ to 35¢ per share. It was the third dividend hike in the past five quarters.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Wednesday, Sept. 28, 1977

Scorpio exudes power and pride. Katharine Hepburn is a prime example of this zodiacal sign. The creativity, the sensitivity, the authority are all there, in one expression, in a gesture or a statement. "All through my life," she tells us, "no man ever made a pass at me — unless he was drunk. They feared rebuke. They were probably wise."

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You're making progress — and waves. No one seems to be neutral. You arouse antagonism, envy, admiration. If married, mate seems rebellious. If single, you may find that a "serious relationship" is threatened. Key is to bring ambitions into focus. Do not fear controversy!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Finish rather than initiate project — study Aries message. What had been "tucked away" is apt to become visible. Surprises occur — control becomes challenge. Proper nutrition aids during crisis. Legal questions should be faced, not ignored.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New deal is in offing — security and finances are involved. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Stick to number "1." Accent on friends, perplexing inquiries. Loyalty could be divided. Heed inner voice. Member of opposite sex may insist on commitment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your assets are plentiful, despite what disgruntled associate might imply. Emphasis on goal, dealings with one "in charge." Gain overall view. Don't get mired down in inter-office politics.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Recent pressures are reviewed, relieved. Sense of communication is enhanced. You're capable now of experimenting, diversifying — you no longer are confined, restricted. Patterns change — social activity aids in casting aside gloom.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be aware of costs, commitments made by one close to you, including partner or mate. Money situation commands attention. Check assets, payments, collections. Aquarius, Taurus and Scorpio persons could figure in scenario. Some traditions go out of the window.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you are analytical, you gain necessary insight. Spotlight on rights, permissions, legal necessities. Partner or mate is involved. You could be in center of controversy. Key is to adjust while continuing to get personal message across. If married, discuss concepts, ideas — be open-minded enough to listen to response.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go slow. Obtain hint from Libra message. Married or single, serious domestic decision, change, move is indicated. Accent on employment, health, services, calls from relatives which affect your security. Diplomacy now is your ally. Remember special anniversary or occasion with a gift.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Communicate in a manner that leaves no question about meanings. Define terms. Argument with one close to you can be stimulating, but don't permit animosity to linger. Young person may feel in opposition to the world.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your ability to remember, to get organized, to assume responsibility, to install confidence in others — these are spotlighted. Stick to the solid. Stay with number "8." Take conservative course. Check leases, investments, insurance policies.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stay out of traffic, if possible. If not, check signals with extra care. relatives, neighbors and others seem intent on creating complications. Maintain balance, humor — make inquiries concerning display and distribution.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on wiping slate clean, getting a new start, a fresh lease on life. Money picture, though in state of confusion, will come into clear, sharp focus. Leo, Aquarius persons are to be taken seriously. Be aware of costs, other commitments.

IF SEPTEMBER 28TH IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are artistic, perceptive, stubborn, temperamental, independent, creative and you can't live without love. You're spoiled by the opposite sex. You have vitality, a charming child-like quality to your nature. You are a combination of impulse and caution, of reserve and devil-may-care. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. By October, your emotional wounds — recently acquired — will be on the road to recovery.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

New football scholarship rules creating balance

Virgil Parker Sports Editor

Time to get your game face on for Saturday. Don't take Indiana lightly, just because the Hoosiers come to town with 1-2 record.

Last year, LSU tied Nebraska — the No. 1 pre-season ranked team in the nation — in the opening game, 6-6. Last week, LSU bombed Rice, 77-0. Yet the week before, Indiana topped the Bengal Tigers.

Any team that can beat LSU has the potential to make Saturday a tough afternoon.

To be honest, I never thought the newly-established reduction in athletic scholarships would have such a dramatic effect on college football.

Allowing just 30 grants per year, and no more than 95 scholarships overall, would mean that the Oklahomas, Nebraskas, Notre Dames, Ohio States, etc., would still get the top athletes, I felt.

The 'haves' would still dominate the sport and the 'have-nots' would still be bringing up the rear.

But last year's five-way tie for the Big Eight lead going into the final week of the season showed that it didn't take long to create competitive balance.

Although the Big Eight teams posted a 7-1 record last weekend, a 4-4 split on opening day and a 3-5 mark the second week of the season is conclusive proof that even the toughest league in the country can't expect to be as dominant in the future as it has been in the past.

The Big Eight gained its power by allowing 45 scholarships each year and a maximum of 120 overall for football. This was at a time when the Big Ten was observing the current 30-95 rules. And the Big Eight teams seldom lost an intersectional game.

"The 30-95 limit has brought us down to a level with the rest of them," Oklahoma's Barry Switzer observes. "We're not like the Nebraska and Oklahoma of a few years back and probably never again will be."

To an outsider, it seemed strange that the major college powers squawked so loudly about the 30-95 limits. Surely, from those numbers you ought to be able to put 11 men on the field at any one time.

The problem, of course, comes from the fact that many high school prospects never pan out at the major college level. At best it's a guessing game, a hit-and-miss affair.

Some rangy, raw-boned prep stars put on weight, gain strength and become all-American types. Others lose speed from the added weight and never master the more complicated techniques needed to succeed.

Recruiting in quantity — as Johnny Majors did when he first went to Pittsburgh, and which eventually produced a national championship for him — allowed room for error on some prospects. The cream came to the top, the others slid into obscurity.

"Doing what I did at Pitt can never happen again," Majors admits. "Putting together a nationally powerful college football team is a numbers game. And we no longer have the numbers."

Sid Wilson, who was here last week as the sports information director for Baylor, made an interesting observation along the "numbers" line. Wilson was the assistant SID at Oklahoma for years before moving to Waco.

"With the old 45 limit in the Big Eight," Wilson noted, "the Sooners had room to gamble on some 'fringe' prospects who wouldn't have been included if the list had to be cut to 30.

"Lucious Selmon was one," Wilson added. "If OU had been under today's rules, they wouldn't have given him a scholarship. He'd have gone somewhere else, which means that Dewey and Leroy would have probably followed him. Rod Shoate and Tinker Owens were in the same category.

"But, because 45 grants were allowed," Wilson concluded, "Oklahoma took a chance on those kids and wound up with five all-Americans they wouldn't have had under today's rules."

There are many similar examples from Nebraska's recent past. Creating competitive balance may be a good thing for college football in general and for the average fan.

But it's not as much fun for the dyed-in-the-wool Big Red fan who used to be able to go to most games to laugh and giggle and enjoy the afternoon and not have to worry about teams like Washington State . . . or Indiana.

Switzer discounts Oklahoma's top ranking

Norman, Okla. (AP) — The Oklahoma Sooners moved back into the No. 1 ranking this week, but Coach Barry Switzer says the polls are not really meaningful this early since they bounce around like an Oklahoma pitchout.

"I'm not concerned about those polls right now. They're a little premature at this stage of the game," he said Tuesday.

"I wish it were nine weeks from today. Those polls bounce around like the little white ball, or, maybe I should say, like our pitchouts do."

The Sooners had carried the preseason No. 1 ranking into their opener with Vanderbilt, but then lost it to Michigan when they fumbled their way to a 25-23 victory.

They rebounded the next week, though, to whip Utah 62-24, and moved into third just ahead of fourth-place Ohio State.

That set up last Saturday's game, the first meeting ever between the college football powers. The Sooners roared to a 20-0 lead, lost that when quarterback Thomas Lott was injured and then came from behind to win on an field goal by Ewe von Schamann with three seconds left.

The victory moved the Sooners ahead of Southern California, a 51-0 winner over Texas Christian. Michigan, which held the No. 1 spot for two weeks over Wolverine Coach Bo Schembechler's objections, dropped to third after edging Navy, 14-7.

Schembechler had said last week that Michigan did not deserve to be ranked No. 1.

Von Schamann said he expected the Sooners to be No. 1 if Michigan had trouble with Navy.

"Before the game, I thought if we win, and Michigan wins big, then we'll be No. 2," von Schamann said. "But Michigan only won by one touchdown. Its a great feeling, but now we'll just have to keep it up."

Senior quarterback Dean Blevins was at the helm in the fourth quarter when Oklahoma drove for Elvis Peacock's touchdown that made it a 28-26 game, and then guided the Sooners into von Schamann's field goal range as time was running out.

"We probably deserved it (the ranking) after beating Ohio State," Blevins said.

"Now we have to go out week after week and play the best we can. Now we really believe we're as good as the prognosticaters said at the first of the year."

Blevins said there was only one problem in being ranked at the top.

"In a way, this can hurt us by giving other teams added incentive," he said, but added:

"We look at things in a positive way here in Oklahoma. The team knows we have the potential to be the best in the country."

NCAA introduces basketball seeding system

Kansas City (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association introduced a seeding system Tuesday into the playoff scheme for its national basketball championship next March.

Twenty-one of the 32 berths in the 1978 tournament still will go to conference champions. In 1979 there will be only 16 of these automatic qualifiers.

The playoffs will start with eight teams playing first-round games in four regions on March 11 and 12. Four teams in each regional will be automatic qualifiers and four will be picked "at-large" and it will be No. 2 vs. No. 3, No. 3 versus No. 2 and No. 4 versus No. 1 in first-round games.

The five extra "automatics" in 1978 will be designated "a-large" teams.

The Atlantic Coast Conference and Eastern Athletic Association champions will play at-large opponents at Charlotte, and the Ivy League and Southern Conference champions will play at-large opponents at Penn on March 12.

The East Coast Conference champion will be an at-large team in this East Region playoff. Three teams from the Eastern College Athletic Conference will be named at-large teams in any of the regionals.

The Big Eight and Missouri Valley champions will meet a-large teams at Wichita and the Southwest Conference and Metro 7 Conference champions will play at-large contenders at Oral Roberts University on March 12.

The Big Ten and Mid-America Conference champions will play at-large teams at Purdue, and the Ohio Valley Conference and Southeast Conference champions will play at-large teams at Tennessee on March 11.

The Pacific 8 and Big Sky Conference champions will play at-large teams at Oregon and the West Coast Athletic Conference and Western Athletic Conference champions will play a-large teams at Arizona State on March 11. The Pacific Coast Athletic Conference champion will be an at-large team in the West Regional playoffs.

Semifinals and finals in the West and Mideast regions will be at Albuquerque and Dayton on March 16 and 18. These rounds in the East and Midwest regions will be at Providence and Kansas on March 17 and 19.

The national semifinals and finals are in St. Louis on March 25 and 27.

The NCAA's Division I Basketball Committee will designate the other at-large teams when it meets in March.

Wayne Duke, Big Ten Conference commissioner and chairman of the committee said the seeding system will eliminate the likelihood that two of the nation's top teams will meet in the first round.

Which conferences are to have the 16 automatic qualifiers in 1979 depends on the records their teams have made in the national playoffs in the five previous years. The same principle was used in deciding which 16 conference champions should be "automatics" and which should be "at-large" qualifiers in 1978.

Writer predicts Ali to triumph over Shavers

New York (AP) — Earnie Shavers has a puncher's chance to win the heavyweight championship Thursday night, but in the end the finesse and experience of Muhammad Ali will prevail.

There's always that chance that this could be one too many trips to the well for the 35-year-old champion.

"He has had a lot of wars . . . fights," says Shavers. "They start to take their toll."

But this corner agrees with the smart guys in Las Vegas, who are are so sure of Ali they are keeping their rolls in their pockets — there is no betting line.

However, Shavers is no Jean-Pierre Coopman or Alfredo Evangelista, who went after the title with popguns. Shavers is a bomber, and it would be foolish to pay too much attention to the fact that most of Shavers' 52 knockouts have been against less than top-quality opponents. Three of his best wins were a three-round knockout of Jimmy Young and a one-round knockout of Jimmy Ellis, both in 1973, and a two-round knockout of Howard Smith last April 17.

An apparent plus for Ali is that he matches Shavers' strong point with his own. He has always been able to take a punch, keeping his feet against such bangers as Sonny Liston, George Foreman, Ron Lyle and Joe Frazier in two fights. He has gotten up from the four knockdowns he suffered in 56 fights, 54 of which he has won.

Shavers' knockout record might have hurt him in the area of stamina. His 60 fights have lasted less than 199 full rounds. He was very tired in the 10th round when he outpointed Henry Clark and was he was at the point of exhaustion when he stopped Roy Williams in the 10th round, both in 1976.

"I've never been in the best shape because I'm a good puncher and I figured I'd knock him (an opponent) out," says Shavers, who has sparred more than 225 rounds for his big chance in Madison Square Garden.

There also is the question of Shavers' ability to take a punch. Three of his five losses have been by knockout—in five rounds by Ron Stander in 1970, one round by Jerry Quarry in 1973 and six round by Lyle two years ago. He was in danger of being stopped by Ellis before he scored a knockout with a right to the temple.

Osborne cites Indiana's team

By Virgil Parker
Sports Editor

Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne is worried that Indiana will come to Lincoln Saturday in the same frame of mind as his Cornhuskers were when they played Alabama.

"Indiana played excellent football in beating LSU two weeks ago," Osborne noted, "then lost to Miami of Ohio last Saturday. They probably look on that Miami game like we did Washington State. It was a game they could have won, but didn't.

"If they react to that loss the way our players did to the Washington State defeat — get all hitched up and come in here and play like they did against LSU — it could go down to the wire."

Osborne warns that the Hoosiers "pass the ball better than Alabama and run it better than Washington State. They have a fine offense. Indiana has moved the ball well against everybody they've played, averaging over 400 yards a game. They were third in the Big Ten last year behind Michigan and Ohio State and have most everybody back from that squad."

Husker defensive coordinator Lance Van Zandt says his 'Black Shirts' are far from ready for Indiana's explosive offense.

"I know darn well they are better than our scout squad (third and fourth team offensive players)," Van Zandt says, "and we couldn't stop our scout squad running their plays today," he added after Tuesday's two-hour drill.

"What got my attention about Indiana," Van Zandt says, "is the fact that they piled up 450 yards against LSU. I realize Rice isn't the greatest team in the world, but last week LSU held Rice to just over 70 yards."

Osborne and Van Zandt both say the Hoosiers have excellent players at the skill positions, in Scott Arnett at quarterback, tailback Darrick Burnett (the leading rusher in the Big Ten and fourth in the nation), and speedy split end Keith Calvin.

"I hope the game is not a crowd-pleaser," Van Zandt said. "You know, one of those games where both teams score a lot of points. But we've only got two days to show a lot of improvement if we hope to stop them."

Indiana's basic formation is the 'I' which Nebraska runs. "They have a lot of the same plays we use," Van Zandt notes. "But they also split a lot of people out wide and go from a pro set as well."

Husker I-back Rick Berns didn't practice Tuesday, but did run at near full speed and says his hip-pointer injury is much improved.

"He's still a little tight," Osborne said. "We thought it would be best to give him one more day. We'll certainly use him Saturday if he's ready. We aren't in a position to save anybody against a team like Indiana."

Zubrod 'totes' prep citation

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

To use an affectionate horse racing term, Bellevue's Kerry Zubrod is "a good mudder."

He's also the Sunday Journal and Star Athlete of the Week after his incredible performance last weekend in Bellevue East's 20-14 win over Millard on a rain-soaked field.

"It was a mud night and he showed he was obviously a good mudder," Bellevue East coach Bill James said of the 5-9, 175-pound junior making his first varsity start.

Zubrod carried the ball 50 times — that's no misprint — and gained what James believes is a Bellevue school record 280 yards rushing. He also scored all three touchdowns on short runs.

"I knew he carried a lot, but I didn't think it was that many times," offered James, who has coached a fleet of standout running backs in his 20 years at Bellevue.

"It was all plughorse type stuff — isos (isolations) and fullback power," James said. "It seemed like we had the ball all night. One of our assitants made the remark that we had a couple 210-yard drives. We finished with 140 yards in penalties. We'd gain 30, then lose 15 on a penalty."

James is convinced the astronomical statistics are accurate. "We've checked the stats with the films and our stat men have been right on the money," he said, refuting any disbelievers.

Zubrod had carried only four times previously this season. He replaced Scott (Cookie) Gilchrist in the lineup when Gilchrist suffered a knee injury.

James has no worries about Zubrod becoming overconfident after his big weekend.

"He's not even sure if he's going to start this week," James said with a chuckle, adding: "He will though."

Others who will receive Athlete of the Week certificates include:

Carol Sponh, Friend — In team's recent 15-11, 5-15, 15-9 volleyball win over Wymore Southern, 5-9 senior kept all 24 serves in play and scored 20 of team's 35 points. She also was credited with 6 sets, 7 returns, 2 blocks and 8 service receives.

Brian Van Diest, Sandhills — Senior quarterback-safety (6-2, 180) did everything in 20-14 win over Stapleton. He ran six times for 45 yards and hit 11 of 15 passes for 177 yards, including TD tosses of 32 and 37 yards. He also had 11 tackles, an interception and punted for a 35-yard average.

Jim Beach, Raymond Central — Senior halfback (5-10, 170) and cocaptain rushed for 179 yards on 18 carries and scored on runs of 58, 45 and 3 yards in team's 18-12 win over David City.

Pete Dennis, York — Duke standout has yet to be challenged in Class B cross country competition this fall. His coach, Jerry Yowell, believes Dennis "could be real competitive in Class A this year because his times rank competitively with all Class A runners."

Bob Lackovic, Omaha Ryan — Despite nursing painful hamstring injury, senior split end (5-9, 160) caught nine passes for whopping 243 yards, including a 30-yard touchdown snag in final 35 seconds to give Knights a 35-28 win over Omaha Bryan.

Larry Wieser, Potter — Senior halfback (5-10, 160) rushed for 146 yards and scored four touchdowns — on runs of 49, 5 and 12 yards and on a 55-yard pass — as team stayed unbeaten with 36-16 win over previously unbeaten Harrisburg.

Tierney wins at Ak

Omaha (AP) — Paul Tierney lists Rapid City, S.D. as home but the folks around Broken Bow and all of Nebraska will still claim him as a hometowner after his stint in the Ak-Sar-Ben Rodeo arena Tuesday night.

Tierney, who is making his first full year on the rodeo circuit, competes in the timed events — calf roping, steer wrestling and team roping — and has really made his presence felt.

He is among the top ten biggest money winners in the calf roping event so far in the 1977 season, which has about five weeks left and will qualify for the National Finals Rodeo in Oklahoma City in December.

But his standout performance at the sixth session of Ak-Sar-Ben's Golden Anniversary Rodeo was as steer wrestler. He took the lead in the second go-around with the fastest time of all performances 3.5 seconds.

Tierney came into professional rodeos after graduating this year from the National College of Business at Rapid City, where he was a member of the rodeo team.

In other rodeo action, John Mundorf of Cozad, Neb., was involved in a three-way tie in the barefack bronc riding with 70 points. The second go-around is led by Sandy Kirby of Greenville, Tex., with 73 points.

Lott to miss Kansas tilt

Norman, Okla. (AP) — Thomas Lott, who was feared lost to the Sooners after Saturday's victory over Ohio State, returned to practice Tuesday, but leading Sooner rusher Billy Sims has been declared "defintely" out for this Saturday's Big Eight opener with Kansas at Owen Field.

"We were a bunch of cripples out there trying to practice," said Coach Barry Switzer. "There's not a player in the offensive backfield who played in the Ohio State game who is not hurt.

"The defense seems to be healthy except for Zac Henderson. (Reggie) Kinlaw practiced good. Lott had the best practice he's had since a week ago today. But Sims is out for Kansas. Hopefully, he'll return for the Texas game.

"Reggie Mathis practiced today," Switzer continued. "I think he will make the game Saturday. We hope we don't have to play J. C. (Watts). You can't expect him to be the difference in the game. If he plays, it will be to get game experience."

Henderson, said trainer Ken Rawlingson, has a groin pull. But defensive backfield Coach Bobby Proctor doesn't see any problem with the injury. "He lined up and went through the workout today," Proctor said. "Ken said he'll be ready to play."

In the only lineup change, Steve Rhodes was moved to offensive right halfback behind David Overstreet. Rhodes, however, will continue to start at split end.

NU nine slates intra-squad tilt

United Press International

Nebraska's baseball team will end a month of late summer and early fall workouts Saturday with an intra-squad game.

Admission will be free for the 10 a.m. contest on the renovated Husker diamond which now has artificial turf on the infield.

Nebraska has 10 lettermen on its squad, including five starters and two front line pitchers from last season's team which won 29 and lost 13.

Leading the Huskers will be sophomore leftfielder Joe Scherger and junior rightfielder Tim Carroll.

Scherger, from Billings, Mont., batted .364 and led the team in hits (43), home runs (8) and runs batted in (41). His RBIs set a Nebraska school record, breaking the mark of 38 set in 1950 by Bob Cerv.

Carroll, who is from Denver, played his freshman season at Arizona Western College under Coach John Sanders, who is now the Husker head coach. Carroll hit .317 last spring and committed only one error in 44 fielding chances.

Pacing the Husker pitching corps will be sophomore Cliff Faust and junior Jeff Costello. Last season Faust was 3-3 with 40 strikeouts and a 3.72 earned run average while Costello was 4-5 with 48 strikeouts and a 4.44 ERA.

NU harriers open season

United Press International

Nebraska's cross country team will open its season Saturday with a dual against Kansas State at the Manhattan Country Club.

Kansas State finished fourth in the Big Eight meet last year while Nebraska wound up last.

Coach Frank Sevigne said he has been pleased by the workouts of his Nebraska runners.

"We're a little farther along than we were last year at this time," he said. "Our workouts have been somewhat encouraging."

Phillies clinch crown

Chicago (AP) — In 1973 it was "You gotta believe." Four years later, Tug McGraw was on hand again to sound the inspirational call to arms for the champions of the National League Eastern Division.

"Westward ho!" he roared Tuesday as he propped one leg up on a drenched clubhouse table and hoisted a bottle of champagne in his right hand .

Moments earlier, with McGraw starting a game-ending double play, the Philadelphia Phillies had clinched the division crown for the second year in a row with a 15-9 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

The Phillies begin the league's best-of-five playoff series on Tuesday against the Dodgers in Los Angeles.

McGraw leaped, punched the air and embraced his teammates. It was reminiscent of his enthusiasm with the 1973 New York Mets, who, with McGraw's "You gotta believe" slogan ringing in their ears, won the division and league titles before losing the World Series to Oakland in seven games.

"I thought if I got in there today, look out, because I feel great. I struck out two men and then they started eating me up," said McGraw. "Then, when Manny Trillo got that hit, I woke up and I said that I'm not going out of this game."

He had relieved Larry Christenson with runners on second and third and no outs in the eighth. He struck out two men before allowing five singles that scored five runs. Trillo led off the ninth with a single before Mike Gordon flied ,out and Dave Rosello hit into a double play.

Tim McCarver, a veteran who has played in three World Series, wore one of the biggest grins during the champagne-spraying festivities.

"You never get tired of this," he said. "This is like getting tired of something else I like to do."

Christenson, who won his sixth straight start and belted a grand slam homer, said: "I knew when I went to the plate that there were three men on base. But when I hit it, I had to look again, and I said, 'Wow, I hit a grand slam.' "

Bob Boone helped out with three runs batted in and some smart baserunning.

"I've been ripped a lot in the past few years about baserunning. I think I'm a good baserunner. I just don't have great speed," he said.

Wild racing weekend recalled

Stop Action

By Ken Hambleton

The weekend was one of the wildest Nebraska had ever seen.

Billy Sunday and William Jennings Bryan were in Lincoln, each to preach their different philosophies, and the fastest race car drivers of their time were in town to inaugurate auto racing at the Nebraska State Fair.

"More cars than I even thought were in Nebraska jammed the fairgrounds as the crowds of 30,000 or more filled the town to the brim," according to Lincoln Daily Star sports editor Alex Mencke in the Sept. 11, 1915, editions.

The crowd of 10,000 at the fairgrounds' track turned out to watch the feats of Wild Bill Endicott in his "Case Comet," Bill Horey in the "Fiat Tornado," Bill Hoffman in the "Bullet," Woodbury Clark in a "Briscoe" and the "fastest daredevil in the world," Barney Oldfield in his "French Flyer."

"The brotherly spirit which is plainly shown between the drivers in the pits, was laid aside and only that spirit of winning was exhibited.

"The five-mile free-for-all race spilled the real thrills of the afternoon, however. The sight of these men speeding around a small track dirt course, the recognized most dangerous kind of track in use made the true red blood of the American citizens course through the veins of everyone present," Mencke said in his report.

"The real excitement came in the fifth and sixth laps of the second heat of the free-for-all in the East end of the track, when brushes between Juddy Kilpatrick in his 200 h.p. Cyclone monster and Johnny Raimey, better known as the 'Cincinnati Kid' threatened to shoot the little Irishman through a wooden fence and into the crowd that packed the fence."

Later Saturday afternoon Endicott smashed the world record for 25 miles, turning the distance in 32.47 minutes. His fastest lap of 34.5 seconds and fastest one mile mark of 1:09 was just short of snapping Oldfield's track records.

Raimey also took a shot at Oldfield's record of 5:07 for five miles.

"As he manipulated his dwarf machine around the track. here and there, missing a post, the crowd cheered lustily. When told his time for five miles was 5:07 tieing the world's record he expressed disgust at 'not opening her up,' " Mencke related in his story.

Endicott also won a special handicap race, in which Horey was given an eighth-mile head start and Bill Gunning a quarter-mile head start, for a five-mile race.

The following day, Sunday, Barney Oldfield and his companion DeLoyd "Tumblebug" Thompson put on an exhibition, while Oldfield was to try and re-establish his track records broken by Endicott.

"The French Flyer, with Oldfield commanding, set the crowd wild as he rounded the track. . . down past the grandstand like the wind," said a story in the Omaha Bee.

But Oldfield was slowed by a muddy track and finished within one second of the world's record.

Sunday evening Mencke of the Lincoln Daily Star witnessed the exhibition by Tumblebug and Oldfield.

Thompson in a Curtiss biplane, and Oldfield in his small Stutz Bearcat, warmed up their engines and prepared for a race around the track.

"The aeroplane tugged and crackled a second, and with a Whirr and dash, arose from the earth and started after the automobile. Barney glanced up on the first open stretch, hatless, a halfburned cigar in his teeth and hair standing straight out. He jerked something. Fire shot out from under the car and it gave with a bound. The faster the car sped the faster the plane soared, but Barney held on to cross the finish line first," Mencke wrote.

Thompson followed the race with an exhibition bomb dropping and through some mistake by mechanics all the bombs exploded at once, two directly under the plane.

"Still a pleasing performance that everyone at the fair that weekend applauded," Mencke wrote.

Two weeks ago Doug Wolfgang, the leading sprint car driver in the country turned a qualifying one-half mile time 25.7 seconds on the same track.

Ansley set for Anselmo-Merna

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

Love may be lovelier the second time around, but Ansley will tell you it's decidedly different the second time around in football.

Last season, Ansley scored a 38-7 regular season win over Anselmo-Merna, then struggled to a scoreless deadlock when the two met in a Loup Valley Conference playoff rematch.

"Whether it's football, basketball or whatever, playing a team a second time in the same season is a psychological disadvantage to the winner the first time," proclaims Ansley coach Dan Moore.

"We were not mentally ready to play the second time," he says. "They were better prepared. I could tell that on the opening kickoff."

Since the tie was the only blemish on Ansley's record last season and the loss was the only one Anselmo-Merna suffered, both teams have spent a lot of time in hot stove discussions during the off season.

Both were young and most everyone would be back in '77. Things would be different this season, vowed each team.

Well, that time has come again. Ansley, the Sunday Journal and Star's second-ranked Class C-2 team, hosts fourth-ranked Anselmo-Merna Friday night.

"It's going to be a good matchup," Moore says. "You won't see any runaway this year. Both teams are too keyed up for that to happen."

This time, though, Ansley may have the psychological advantage after last year's collapse in the playoff.

"It hurt at the time," Moore recalls. "But you had to live with the result. It wasn't a matter of life or death. We had an unbeaten season. It just could have ended on a better note."

Merna coach John Heffner had an explanation for the lopsided result in last year's first meeting.

"We were awed," he remembers. "Our kids had never been in a big football game. Ansley scored in the first minute. That broke our backs."

Considering Merna had not experienced a winning football season in the previous 11 years, the reaction was not surprising.

A repeat performance is unlikely.

Ansley has breezed to its four wins, leading up to this year's showdown.

Nebraskan seeks Olympics

By Chuck Sinclair
Staff Sports Writer

Finding a needle in a haystack would be easier than being a Nebraskan with Olympic volleyball aspirations.

With her background of being raised on a farm north and west of Palymra, it seems Julie Vollertsen would have a better chance of finding that needle.

But Julie, an 18-year-old former Sunday Journal and Star Super State selection in volleyball who would like to defy those odds against Olympic competition, has already made progress beyond her own belief as a member of the Adidas Junior National Volleyball Team.

"Just being here in itself is unbelievable," she said by phone from Huntington Beach, Calif., where her team is stationed after returning from the Junior World Games in Brazil. "There just aren't words to describe the feeling."

It was all made possible when Marge Davenport, her Lincoln coach of Arjay Advertising, got Julie a test with Junior National officials. She was then invited to join the team in a two-week adjustment period, then a 90-day probationary period.

That was back in mid-May. Now a bona fide member of the Adidas team under Southern Cal coach Chuck Erbe, she's made trips to Korea, Japan, Hawaii and Brazil.

"Marge knew my goal and really helped me in getting this far," Vollertsen said of her Olympic hopes. "The rest, I have to do on my own. To someday be in the Olympics is just a dream for someone from the Midwest."

Vollertsen figures that besides being from Nebraska, time is also against her.

"To make the 1980 team doesn't give me very much time," she said. "At first you think, two years, you should be able to do it. But then your attitude changes because you know how much experience you have to have.

Julie Vollertsen
. . . Olympic dream.

"There's a chance for 1980," she added. "But if I don't make it, the next Olympics is in 1984. That's seven years from now. That's an awful long time. You just have to try and get the highest competition you can."

There are alternatives to the Olympics, like the World Games which can be just as exciting for a participant, according to Vollertsen.

"When I first came, I wanted the Olympics so bad," she said. "Now, I still want them, but they're not everything. International competition is just as exciting."

While working with the Junior National team, Julie is attending Huntington Beach Junior College and hopes to earn a scholarship at Southern Cal like some of the older members of the team.

It seems the hardest part of the whole ordeal was leaving Palmyra for California, something her parents had no idea was going to happen.

"We didn't know anything about it at all until she announced it one day," Julie's mother, Elva, said. "We didn't know what was happening because she kept putting scholarship offers off from schools like Kansas and Nebraska. We were worried about her.

More sports, page 40

"When she did tell us, we knew she was good, but we didn't know she was that good," Mrs. Vollertsen said. "Marge is the one who trained her. We're real proud of it. We had three sons who were all pretty good athletes, but we just had no idea that Julie was the type athlete she was."

Julie plans to spend Christmas back at home, but then she'll be off again, preparing for the Junior National tournament.

"It's funny, but I didn't realize what home was until I left it," Julie said. "I always had a good home, a home that was good to me, but I just didn't appreciate it like I do now.

"I felt like it was time to leave home," she added. "It was something I had to do. And if I was going to be out on my own, I figured Nebraska or California, either way, it didn't make any difference."

"She's bull-headed and determined," Mrs. Vollertsen said. "She does things her own way, but she does them right."

Young has identity crisis

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

When Larry Young scored Nebraska's first touchdown last Saturday against Baylor, many people were asking, "who is that guy?"

But Young's identity problem didn't just belong to the fans. On his television show Sunday evening, Cornhusker Coach Tom Osborne credited Tony Samuel instead of Young with recovering the ball in the end zone for a score after Randy Rick blocked a Baylor punt.

Osborne's slip is understandable. Young and Samuel play the same defensive left end position, they are from the same high school and were recruited together.

But if the 6-1, 205-pound Young really does have a bit of an identity problem, it's probably due to the fact he has played so many positions as a Husker.

A high school all-American running back at Lincoln High in Jersey City, N.J., Young has been a jack-of-all-trades at Nebraska. He has played monster back, linebacker and defensive end.

His switch to the left flank during spring ball last year attests to Young's fine natural athletic ability. He made the transition so well, that he was pushing his good friend Samuel for the No. 1 job by the end of spring practice.

His improvement continued in the fall to the point Nebraska defensive end coach George Darlington is now able to alternate Young, Samuel and George Andrews. Darlington gave Young his first starting assignment against Alabama.

"The thing that makes Larry such a fine defensive end is his great speed and tackling ability," Darlington said. "He has so much agility and quickness that he is one of our finest tacklers.

"And the fact he learned the position in one spring speaks well of his overall ability and tells you how hard he has worked."

Young says the toughest part of the switch was "as a defensive back you sit back and wait to hit someone. As an end, you have to move up fast and make things happen."

A senior majoring in elementary education, Young rejected offers from USC, UCLA, Maryland and Ohio State among others, to attend Nebraska. Former Nebraska all-America Rich Glover, who was also from Jersey City, helped recruit Young.

"His (Glover's) high school was our biggest rival," Young said. "Rich told me I'd like it out here and he was right."

Ironically, Young was Nebraska's No. 1 recruiting target that year in Jersey City. The Huskers took Samuel as sort of a package deal, but Samuel ended up starting the past two years while Young bounced from position to position trying to find himself.

After his freshman and redshirt years, Young became discouraged with football and quit the team in 1975. He stayed in school and rejoined the Huskers the next year.

"I guess I became a little disenchanted like Earl (NU wingback Earl Everett who left the squad last week) and didn't think I was helping the team," Young said. "But I really missed football and the coaches talked to me and said I could be of value to the team."

Now that he is battling his friend Samuel for the top spot, Young said, "as long as we all get a chance to play I think it's fine. Tony and I still hang around together. We are good friends."

Pleased with his decision to rejoin the team after a year's absence, Young is also happy with the life he and his wife Diane — also from New Jersey — have found in Lincoln.

"I think we will probably stay out here after we graduate," Young said. "I've had enough of big city life. We really enjoy it out here."

New York honors Ruth

New York (AP) — Friday, Sept. 30, has been declared "Babe Ruth Day" in an official proclamation by Mayor Abe Beame.

The ceremony was conducted Tuesday in the Blue Room at City Hall, commemorating the 50th anniversary of Babe Ruth's 60th home run, a season record until topped by Roger Maris over a longer season in 1961.

"This is a tribute to the greatest sports hero in baseball," the mayor declared as he presented the document to officials of the Babe Ruth Foundation.

The Foundation was a pet project of the famous New York Yankee slugger to help disadvantaged children.

Hall of Fame member Monte Irvin represented Baseoall Commissioner Bowie Kuhn at the event, attended by other sports and civic dignitaries.

Nader helps sports fans

New York (UPI) — Pity the poor sports fan.

Gouged by high ticket prices, defrauded by staged events and frustrated by owners who trade players at their prime, he is ignored by owners as they march to ever higher profits.

No more, says consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

Nader Tuesday took up the banner of sports fans everywhere by announcing the formation of an organization to represent fans on issues ranging from ticket prices to artificial turf and stadium hot dogs.

Appropriately enough, Nader's new consumer group is nicknamed F.A.N.S., an acronymn for the Fight to Advance the Nation's Sports.

"Let's face it, the sports industry is monopolistic," said Nader. "In many ways, the industry is gouging and defrauding the sports consumer."

F.A.N.S., said Nader, will represent the interests of sports fans wherever such representation is needed — before the leagues and player associations, individual owners, the broadcast media, Congress, federal, state and local government and the courts.

Nader has put $10,000 of his own money into the formation of F.A.N.S., but the group will rely entirely on the $9 dues requested from each member.

What drove Nader to consider the far-fetched idea was the growing number of sports controversies over the last 10 months — from the trade of Tom Seaver, the New York Mets' three-time Cy Young Award winner, to the "staged" Muhammad Ali-Antonio Inoki boxer - wrestler match and winner-take-all tennis matches.

Major goals for the new group include making sure the average fan can afford tickets, that tickets are available to all and not just the elite few, that the opinions of fans are heard, that stadium food is not overpriced and that tax breaks and special privileges granted to sports teams actually serve the public interest.

Heading the new organization is Peter Gruenstein, lawyer, writer and former Brooklyn Dodger fan.

"Fans are angry. They know they're being ripped off," said Gruenstein. "No one seems to realize that fans are consumers just like people who buy cars."

Nader believes the sports consumer is not without weapons, whether it is lobby before Congress, writing investigative reports, taking court action, or even staging massive boycotts.

"It is time to establish a representative process for sports fan," said Nader. "No longer can the industry expect supine, tolerant fans."

Race driver caught speeding

Starkey, N.Y. (AP) — Jacques Henri Laffite, French Grand Prix racing driver, paid a $100 fine for speeding Tuesday after leading police on a 14-mile chase at speeds over 100 miles an hour, the Yates County sheriff's department reported.

Laffite, 33, is scheduled to drive in the U. S. Grand Prix at nearby Watkins Glen on Sunday.

The sheriff's office said the pursuit began at Dresden, Yates County, shortly after midnight Tuesday and continued 14 miles over Route 14 until Schuyler County sheriff's deputies stopped the rental car at a roadblock at Gabriel's Junction.

Gem merchants suddenly vanish

New York (AP) — Arthur Conan Doyle, who created Sherlock Holmes, would have loved it.

One day before Judaism's most solemn holiday, diamond broker Pinchos Jaroslawicz left for a meeting with diamond cutter Shlomo Tal. He vanished with perhaps $1 million in diamonds in his possession — and five days later Tal was missing, too.

Police here want to know if there is a link between the two disappearances. Belgian police in Brussels and Antwerp have been asked through the international police agency, Interpol, to watch the diamond centers there for Jaroslawicz.

"A very strange coincidence," said Detective Sgt. Robert Young. "We're just fishing. We have nothing solid to go on."

The case is a puzzling one, focusing attention on the informal insiders' world of the West 47th Street diamond center, the world's largest gem mart — a place where Orthodox Jews predominate and where a handshake rather than a written record often seals a transaction.

Jaroslawicz, 25, was widely known and respected in the diamond district. It was not unusual for him to be entrusted with jewels belonging to importers, for whom he acted as a broker.

He was said to have been carrying $100,000 to $1 million worth of gems when he vanished a little more than 24 hours before Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement, began at sundown last Wednesday.

Tal, 31, is an Israeli who came here six years ago and lived in a $75,000 suburban home in Plainview, Long Island.

He disappeared Sunday morning after leaving Plainview en route to the diamond district. Behind him he left his wife and their three children, aged 18 months to 8 years.

Jaroslawicz signed out the jewels at the Diamond Dealers' club on West 47th Street last Tuesday, then reportedly headed for a meeting with Tal. Tal told police Jaroslawicz never arrived.

In the absence of any ransom demand, police ruled out kidnaping in Jaroslawicz's disappearance. On the other hand, a voluntary flight seemed unlikely, coming as it would have shortly before the day which Orthodox Jews set aside for fasting and atonement.

Jaroslawicz lived in Brooklyn's Flatbush neighborhood with his wife and 2-year-old daughter.

Investigators said they had learned that Jaroslawicz and his wife had planned a business and vacation trip to Majorça, "winding up in Brussels for diamond business," and had planned to leave Sunday.

Funds earmarked for U.S. 81 work

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

York — If the federal government continues to provide funds, some $26 million will be spent on improving U.S. 81 through Nebraska during the next six years, state engineer David O. Coolidge said Tuesday night.

Speaking to a meeting of the Nebraska U.S. Highway 81 Association here, Coolidge said uncertainty over federal funding and inflation are the two big variables in the State Department planning.

Recent news reports have noted a high death toll on the north-south highway, and Coolidge said some of the money will be spent on safety improvements.

However, he said only about 25% of the fatalities can be blamed on the condition of the road.

"The condition of the highway is not a factor when you go through a stop sign or make a U-turn in front of a truck," the state engineer said.

"I think speed has got a lot to do with it," Coolidge added.

He also pointed to heavy truck traffic on the highway and said "some of those trucks go a little fast."

About 65 persons attended the Tuesday evening meeting, representing U.S. 81 cities including Norfolk, Madison, Columbus, Osceola, Stromsburg, York, Geneva, Chester and Hebron.

Collidge briefed the group on current work costing about $7.7 million, and explained the numerous projects his department envisions for the next half dozen years.

"We do not know what President Carter and the Congress are going to do," Collidge said of the future federal highway program.

"We also have no idea what to expect from inflation," the state engineer said.

Among most of the projects planned for the highway, which runs from Yankton, S.D., to the Kansas border, are such things as widening, resurfacing, paving shoulders and lighting.

Two new bridges also are planned to span the Platte River south of Columbus where U.S. 81 is to be widened to four lanes.

Collidge said state officials long have recognized U.S. 81 as a major north-south thoroughfare in Nebraska and "we want to make it a safer and more efficient highway."

Here's a yard sale you must attend

Newport, R.I. (AP) — It's a yard sale with a little something extra. There's a 30-foot dinner table, a porcelain dinner service for 60 and a 12-leaf screen from China's K'Ang Hsii period.

The items — furnishings of Bois Dore, the summer mansion of the late Elinor Dorrance Ingersoll — went on sale Tuesday. The auction ends Wednesday.

"Mrs. Ingersoll only bought top quality and she bought at a time when things were well made," said Anthony J. H. DuBoulay, senior director of the London office of Christie's, the auction house. "At this level of quality, we're mainly going to be selling to collectors and dealers.

"But there are things for the buyer with only $100 to spend as well. If you were looking for some very fine bronze coat hooks, say, or you might get a pair of bedroom lamps or perhaps even a couch from the servants' quarters."

Bois Dore is one of the last of Newport's summer "cottages" to be maintained in grand style. Most of those "cottages" are also referred to as opulent mansions.

And unlike other mansions here which succumbed to modernity and became museums, Bois Dore remained as the setting for elegant parties through the 1960s, with a staff of 30 servants on hand.

Mrs. Ingersoll was the daughter of John T. Dorrance, founder of the Campbell Soup Co. She and her first husband bought Bois Dore in 1940. She married her second husband, Stuart H. Ingersoll, in 1965.

Land northwest of G.I. destined for landfill use

Grand Island (UPI) — The Hall County Board of Supervisors has voted to condemn 80 acres northwest of Grand Island for use as a county landfill.

The board had spent about two years looking for an appropriate site.

In voting to initiate condemnation proceedings, the board rejected a planning commission recommendation to use a transfer system to haul county garbage to the city landfill.

The present county landfill can be used only for about another month.

The supervisors said when the city landfill reaches capacity, Grand Island can arrange joint usage with the county of the same landfill.

The land picked for the county landfill is owned by Vermoyne Wiese, an area farmer. Wiese rejected two offers of a lease and two offers of a sale of his land, contending it would put him out of business.

Parents see daughter after alleged kidnaping

A 24-year-old Hastings woman who has been missing for nine days returned to Lincoln Tuesday night from San Francisco where she told authorities she had escaped from two men who allegedly kidnaped her in Lincoln on Sept. 18.

Carrie Uhrmacher called her parents from San Francisco Tuesday morning and told them she had escaped from two men who forced her into their car at a Lincoln phone booth on the 18th, the day she was to meet her parents who were visiting friends in Lincoln.

Ms. Uhrmacher returned to Lincoln by plane Tuesday night, accompanied by an aunt from the San Francisco area. It was a tearful reunion with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Uhrmacher, and her younger sister.

"This is such a relief," Mrs. Uhrmacher said as she waited for her daughter's arrival at Municipal Airport.

J. Krupinsky of the Omaha Regional Office of the FBI said Ms. Uhrmacher would face further interrogation about the alleged kidnaping. Details of the incident will be released by the Omaha office Wednesday, he said.

Ms. Uhrmacher was the subject of a search after her car was found in downtown Lincoln early last week. Lincoln police said her keys were in the car which was found near Centennial Mall and O St.

Her father, Donald Uhrmacher of Hastings, said his daughter called him Tuesday morning after her escape. She told San Francisco authorities that she had escaped from her abductors when they stopped to buy cigarettes, and one of the abductors told her to "get out and run like hell," according to California officials.

"She was definitely shook up and said she was tired and hungry after her ordeal," her father said.

Ms. Uhrmacher, an agricultural lab technician in Hastings, told her parents she stopped at a pay phone on O St. to call her parents and was grabbed from behind by two men who forced her into the back seat of a white Ford sedan. She was told to lie down while the men drove out of town, she said.

The men drove to San Francisco where they stopped at about 4 a.m. Tuesday to buy cigarettes. Then she made her escape, her parents said.

'Ma Bell' rate hike poses budget dilemma for NETV

By Harry Jackson
Star Staff Writer

"Ma Bell" hikes rates regardless of race, religion, color or electronic origin, Nebraska Educational Television Commission members found out Tuesday.

The Northwestern Bell Telephone company, which handles transmissions between the ETV stations will raise rates on the television network effective July, 1978.

NETV General Manager Jack McBride told the commission the current $247,074 charge would be hiked to $284,084, a move that puts a crimp in the ETV operating budget.

The network has been paying the same rate since 1963.

Transmission rates are reduced for the educational television network's nine stations, but the board still felt the fiscal surprise should prompt a look into other transmission methods.

Other methods could include microwave transmissions or other wire services besides the telephone company.

In other action, the board heard that the satellite receiver which was to be built on airport property will still be built there but about 200 feet from the original location.

The move, approved by the board, was the result of an informal protest by the telephone company that the satellite's microwaves may interfere with telephone company microwaves.

A bid of $25,700 from the Ampex Corporation was accepted for an eight-track audio recorder for the ETV network.

The bid was second from the lowest as the 3M Mimicom Division bid $25,075. But an attachment that would synchronize the 3M machine with the ETV machines would cost an extra $3,850 so the board rejected it.

The Ampex machine would fit in as is.

Indian ETV agency forms

An agency designed to be the voice of Native Americans in the public television arena has placed its national office in Lincoln.

The Native American Public Braodcasting Consortium (NAPBC) board of directors holds its first meeting Wednesday and Thursday in the Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center (the NETV building) at 1800 N. 33rd, where its office will be located.

Operating on a $103,113 grant from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, the office has a three-fold purpose.

— To operate a central library and distribution center for material produced by local public television stations about Native Americans.

— To operate a resource center for the Public Broadcasting Service and educational institutions needing Native American materials.

— To provide training opportunities and encourage Native Americans to enter the television programming industry.

The 14-member board includes Ron Hull, Nebraska ETV program manager.

Nine Native Americans are among the board members.

Exon also reappointed Mrs. David Dow and Mrs. Barbara Doyle of Lincoln, Mrs. Robert Bridge of Norfolk and the Rev. Joseph Labaj of Omaha. The terms are for three years, expiring Sept. 2, 1980.

Exon also named D.J. Erington, Omaha Public Works director, to serve on the Board of Public Roads Classifications and Standards. He will replace Terrance Pesek of Omaha.

Fremont man enters plea to 3 income tax charges

Omaha (AP) — J. Fred Bremer of Fremont was arraigned Tuesday on three charges of failing to file federal income tax returns for the years of 1971, 1972 and 1973.

He entered a plea of innocent before Magistrate Richard C. Peck to counts one and two and a guilty plea to count three. A date for formal entry of the guilty plea and sentencing will be set by the District Court.

If convicted of these violations, Bremer faces a maximum $10,000 fine, a year in prison, or both for each violation year. In addition, he will be liable for the income taxes and civil penalties determined to be due.

Chadron man faces charges of filing fraudulent tax forms

Stanley C. Campbell of Chadron was arraigned Tuesday in U.S. District Court on two counts in connection with filing false tax and fraudulent withholding forms.

He appeared before Judge Warren Urbom on specific charges of willfully filing a false and fraudulent Form W-4, Employes Exemption Certificate, and one count of willfully filing a false and fraudulent Form W-4E, Exemption From Withholding.

Campbell chose to stand mute on the charges and the court entered pleas of innocent on his behalf. The date of the trial, to be held at North Platte, has not been set.

Exon appoints Omahan to direct water agency

The chairman of the 10-state Missouri River Basin Commission has been named by Gov. J. James Exon to head the Nebraska Water Resources Department.

Exon said John W. Neuberger, 41, of Omaha, will join state government Nov. 1, succeeding Marion Ball who is retiring.

Neuberger submitted his resignation from the commission job, a federal position, effective Oct. 26. He was appointed to head the Missouri River Basin Commission five years ago by then Republican President Richard Nixon.

Even though Jimmy Carter, a Democrat, was elected president last fall, Exon backed Neuberger for reappointment. Exon is a Democrat.

Reportedly Neuberger was asked Monday by White House officials to resign.

Neuberger, from South Dakota, graduated from South Dakota State University in Brookings. He was a hydraulic engineer in Wyoming and South Dakota before joining the University of Nebraska as an assistant professor of Extension in 1963.

In 1964, he was appointed manager of the Papio Watershed in Omaha. In 1969 he was appointed deputy assistant secretary of water and power resources of the U.S. Interior Department. He held that job until he was named chairman of the commission in 1972.

Exon aid Norman Otto said Tuesday Neuberger was hired to head the State Water Resources Department because he has the technical background to handle the job.

UNL budget problem prompts consideration of alternatives

Associated Press

Ned Hedges, University of Nebraska-Lincoln interim academic vice chancellor, is pondering alternatives to a budgeting problem.

"The budget is just too large for the revenue available," he said.

Hedges is trying to find money for growing departments such as business, engineering and journalism at a time when enrollment throughout the university is static and money is tight.

"It will make some people very angry when the position paper on budgeting is presented," he said.

Approximately $41 million is listed for expenses in the budget section covering UNL instruction, but projected revenue is only $40 million.

Some alternatives reported as under consideration include:

— Having every UNL unit return 5 per cent of its budget for redistribution to needy departments as was done in 1972-73.

— Elimination of areas or entire programs that are deemed unnecessary.

— As retirements and other vacancies occur, return money for the positions involved to a university-wide fund.

— Develop a staffing formula designed to drop a faculty member for enrollment declines in the range of 30 students.

— Reassign and retrain faculty members for work in other departments.

NU official takes Minnesota U post

Glenn Smith, University of Nebraska assistant vice president for administration, has accepted the comptroller's position at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis, Minn.

Smith came to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 1963 as assistant to the comptroller.

He will be responsible for financial, purchasing and data processing operations.

"There is some more money, but that is secondary to the opportunity," said Smith.

Smith, who earned bachelor's and master's degrees at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, will begin his Minnesota job in early November.

Army report finds much to criticize at West Point

(c) New York Times

Washington — An Army report sharply criticized West Point's academic and training programs and said the 175-year-old military academy suffered from a "slackening of the pursuit of excellence."

In a blunt assessment of the United States Military Academy, the report by three Army generals said West Point is plagued by poor morale, a lack of supervision and planning, "intellectual inbreeding of the faculty," resistance of change, negative attitudes towards learning among cadets and even a pervasive lack of humor.

"General cadet ambivalence toward academic pursuits and things military reflects the lack of coherent institutional purpose at the academy," said the 176-page study. "Cadets arrive at the academy wishing for and expecting to find a good education, but certain characteristics of the environment undercut the academic program."

The study added: "Although cadets continue to view the academic program as important to their success at West Point and as Army officers, the 'system' does not seem to support that view. It does not require uniformly high performance, and it allows some relatively unqualified cadets to pass courses and graduate. Many cadets resolve this obvious inconsistency by adopting the attitude that although education per se has importance, studies at West Point are often irrelevant and merit only a superficial approach."

In issuing the report, the study group submitted 152 recommendations to Army Chief of Staff General Bernard W. Rogers. The proposals urged the Army to give cadets more time for serious academic work and less time to the numberous military, athletic and extracurricular activities that leave students "whipsawed."

Army officials said the study — which was set up last year after the worst cheating scandal in West Point's history — will serve as the basis for major changes at the academy, which is now headed by Gen. Andrew J. Goodpaster, former commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and adviser to four presidents.

The report said a problem that may have contributed to the scandal was excessive demand on cadets, including time-wasting chores, that resulted in "scattered academic attention and limited opportunity for study in depth."

The study said this encouraged marginal performance, with cadets getting by in a number of areas but rarely excelling in any. What was emerged, the study indicated, was an anti-academic bent among numerous cadets.

"We do not believe that attitudes toward academic pursuits are satisfactory among cadets in the lowest 60 to 70% of each class," said the report. These attitudes are summarized in cadet slang as "cool on academics," "spec and dump," and "cooperate and graduate," each with its own variation on the theme of giving only that effort to studies needed to graduate.

Although many cadets work for academic achievement, the report says, "a significant number do not. Some even attempt to discourage other cadets from seeking academic distinction, using methods which range from casual disparaging remarks to conscious manipulation of peer evaluation."

On the teaching staff, the report said, "There are doubts and conficts about the role of tactical officers, the place of women in the Army, and priorities in the education and training of cadets. Clevages exist between faculty and non-faculty, academic and military, senior and junior, tenured and non-tenured, male and female, officer and cadet.

"Rather than joining in pursuit of a common goal, the various elements follow their separate aims, lacing in true communication, uniformed of each other's interests," the report said.

Its proposals included major changes in the academy's staff structure, a reduction of the overall academic program for cadets to "diminish fragmentation," an emphasis on analysis and critical evaluation in applied sciences and engineering courses, an overhaul of cadet schedules with emphasis on academic pursuits, and an effort to "discourage dilletantism."

In seeking to determine what was lacking at West Point, the study group said it "found that a relatively humorless atmosphere seems to prevail . . . A certain grimness marks many of the cadets, an outlook which may blind them to many of lifes humorous aspects and rob them of much of the enjoyment of their four-year experience."
